Summary of Achievements

This annual report covers a period between October 2012 and September 2013. What did DC-Cam achieve in terms of memory and justice for Cambodian society? During this period DC-Cam contributed significantly to justice, reconciliation, education and uncovering the truth behind the Khmer Rouge regime.

DC-Cam continued to be the ONLY institution providing primary documentary materials and archival assistance to the ECCC on a regular and large-scale basis:

DC-Cam’s continued support for the Khmer Rouge tribunal contributed significantly to the conclusion of Case 002/01 which was heard for 212 days. A verdict against the accused is expected early next year. DC-Cam provided a total of 45,494 pages of document and 266 photos. As in the previous years, this year the ECCC (which is part of DC-Cam’s overall search for justice) met with some challenges including death of the accused, unfitness to stand trial, lack of financial security and administrative crisis. Amidst these problems, DC-Cam remained the only light focused on the search of justice and the memory of the Khmer Rouge genocide. Former Khmer Rouge foreign minister and deputy prime minister Ieng Sary died in March 2013 at the age of 87. His wife Ieng Thirith had been declared unfit to stand trial on September 16, 2012. ECCC prosecutors determined that his death was from natural causes. Two months later Sou Met, a former Khmer Rouge commander and suspect of the court, died of diabetes and high blood pressure. The death of the two made it more urgent to speed up prosecution of those former Khmer Rouge leaders who are still alive because their deaths carried with them history and severance of justice. After the death of Ieng Sary, the ECCC immediately terminated all proceedings against him. To make sure justice is delivered, governments of Japan, Australia, New Zealand and the EU pledged to support the ECCC with a total funding of nearly 30 million USD. Except for the government of New Zealand, the other three donors supported only the international side of the ECCC.

DC-Cam assisted victims and survivors to complement the work of the ECCC:

Not only did DC-Cam directly assist the ECCC in the reporting year, but DC-Cam staff members helped civil parties, complainants and villagers who survived the Khmer Rouge genocide in their engagement and follow-up with the proceedings of the Khmer Rouge tribunal by helping them travel to Phnom Penh and meeting with them in their villages. This is our effort to make sure that many direct victims of the genocide are able to understand the meaning of justice being delivered to them by the ECCC. VPA team assisted 31 civil parties and complainants in Case 004 to file victim information forms. The team also met victims in seven different locations around the country meeting with thousands of villagers to bring updates to them about the ECCC, discuss justice and solicit ideas about reparations. They also brought 158 civil parties and villages to observe court hearings.

DC-Cam is the leading source of learning about Khmer Rouge history and genocide justice for students and researchers both locally and globally:

Direct victims of the Khmer Rouge are not the only groups of people DC-Cam reached in the reporting year. DC-Cam also tried to engage the academic and student communities both inside Cambodia and overseas. DC-Cam published 10,000 monthly booklets reporting on and updating trial proceedings. DC-Cam online bloggers reported ECCC hearings almost immediately after they happened and uploaded trial footages in English, Khmer and French languages. DC-Cam also sent an educational team to 17 local universities talking to nearly 1000 students about resources which they can access to advance their understanding of Khmer Rouge history and related justice process.

DC-Cam continued to make breakthroughs in collecting and preserving Khmer Rouge history materials despite many attempts by others to do the same over the past sixteen years and the increasing rarity of the materials:

Despite progress at the Khmer Rouge tribunal and attempts to move forward with memory and justice, documentation remains one of the most important activities at DC-Cam. Documentation includes data collection, cataloging and database management. It is a long-term and tedious project which significantly contributes to many aspects of the justice, memory and healing processes, thus closing the darkest period of Khmer Rouge terror for victims and the Cambodian people, moving them forward with strength and hope. This year DC-Cam collected 3,841 pages of Khmer Rouge history-related documents, 7 documentary films and footages and 117 photos. These will form a solid basis in the future for efforts in uncovering the truth behind the Khmer Rouge genocide. It is DC-Cam’s long-term effort to rebuild Cambodian society through the Sleuk Rith Institute.

DC-Cam refashioned a former zone of conflict and fear into a zone of conscience and education:

DC-Cam directly participated with the Cambodian government in transforming Anlong Veng from a site of fear and mystery to a site of conscience, education and memory. Anlong Veng was the last Khmer Rouge stronghold which stood until top Khmer Rouge commanders defected into the Royal Government of Cambodia in the mid-1990s. Today DC-Cam is working with the ministry of tourism to conduct research into the history of the town, its role under the Khmer Rouge, its last remnants of Khmer Rouge organization and the events leading up to the eventual fall of the Khmer Rouge rebels. Researchers at DC-Cam interviewed 320 former Khmer Rouge members and villagers in Anlong Veng and nearby districts. In the reporting year, about 90% of the final document was completed. It is expected to be published next year.

DC-Cam taught many high school students and young people around the country about Khmer Rouge history through genocide education:

One of the key elements in rebuilding a post-conflict and post-genocide society is education. Educating the next generation about the source, parties and consequences of conflict and genocide is important for both prevention in the future and remembrance of the past. In this direction, DC-Cam continued the effort to educate Cambodian high school students about the past through genocide education. In the reporting year, DC-Cam trained 388 pre-service teachers and commune teachers for six days about history of the Khmer Rouge and teaching methodologies for the history. These teachers will then transfer their knowledge to students in high school classrooms. DC-Cam also trained 250 army students at the Army Institute on Khmer Rouge history including aspects of Khmer Rouge military organization. Such training of the army students is important for them in beginning their careers as army officers. They must fully understand that the Khmer Rouge military played a very important role in the conflict and resulting massacre. Such understanding will help them make a distinction between following orders and conscience in critical situations.

DC-Cam continued to be the public source of research and learning about the Khmer Rouge genocide:

DC-Cam’s physical facility as a public information room continued to serve visitors from around the world. This year DC-Cam received 962 visitors who read documents, requested books and magazines, watched films, interviewed staff members, conducted research for school, toured the center, and sought information about missing family members. In the process, DC-Cam provided 611 magazines (Khmer and English issue), 307 copies of the DK History books, 312 copies of DC-Cam outreach booklet Genocide: The Importance of Case 002, and 290 copies of KRT Observation booklets. DC-Cam also made photocopies of several hundred pages of Khmer Rouge archives. Considering that DC-Cam is generally known as an archival facility, the number of visitors for the year is fairly high. This occurred because 1) There was a marked increase in interest in researching and trying to understand Khmer Rouge history and 2) DC-Cam’s award-winning film A River Changes Course attracted great attention from the public.

DC-Cam has led the way in highlighting perils of rapid development in post-genocide and post-conflict Cambodia through the production of an award-winning film:

One of the greatest achievements DC-Cam made in the reporting year is the production of our award-winning documentary A River Changes Course. This film has brought global attention toward Cambodia’s post-conflict development. It also brought recognition toward DC-Cam’s work in a field other than the Khmer Rouge history. However, DC-Cam has always argued that Cambodian societal behavior today is intimately linked to the genocide of the past. Thus the film depicted three Cambodian families, one living in the central plain, one in the highlands and one on the Tonle Sap great lake. Each came from three distinct ethnic groups: the indigenous Jarai, the Khmer and the Cham fishermen. Since its launch in late 2012, the film won ten international awards:

1. Winner of the Grand Jury Prize for World Cinema Documentary at the Sundance Film Festival
2. Winner of the Filmmaker Award at Full Frame Documentary Film Festival
3. Winner of the Grand Jury Prize for Best Feature at the Environmental Film Festival at Yale
4. Winner of the Human Rights Award at River Run Film Festival
5. Winner of the Grand Jury Prize for Best Documentary Feature
6. Winner of Documentary Feature Golden Gate Award
7. Winner of Outstanding Director Award and the Outstanding Cinematography Award
8. Winner of the Special Jury Prize for Best Director and Best Cinematography
9. Conscience Award at Docville Film Festival in Belgium
10. Winner Award for Best Feature Film at the Green Film Festival in Seoul
DC-Cam is to construct a place to ensure the lasting memory of the Khmer Rouge victims in cooperation with the world’s leading architectural firm Zaha Hadid:

DC-Cam has been planning the Sleuk Rith Institute for many years. The construction and operation of the institute will bring together the many factors needed to achieve the results necessary to perpetuate the memory of the Khmer Rouge genocide. DC-Cam is a private, non-profit NGO without significant financial resources beyond those provided by the donors. Yet we envision that there is a need for a museum, an education center and a research facility to serve the memory and understanding of genocide not just within Cambodia but in Southeast Asia. Thus, it is important to work with the Cambodian government to secure land suitable for construction. Doing so takes political will, careful arrangements and time. It took DC-Cam several years to arrive at a formal MOU with the government to secure a piece of land in Phnom Penh. At the same time DC-Cam was working on the design of the Sleuk Rith Institute. DC-Cam has the responsibility to memorialize the Khmer Rouge victims, to acknowledge their deaths and suffering and to bring healing to Cambodian society. Thus the design of the Sleuk Rith Institute has to be iconic and meaningful. Fortunately this year, DC-Cam reached an agreement with the world’s leading architecture company Zaha Hadid to design the Sleuk Rith Institute. A formal agreement is expected next year.

1. The ECCC: Activity and Event

A. Chronological summary of activities of the ECCC

On October 9, the tribunal announced that the apology statement made by Kaing Guek Eav is available in audio and video format on the ECCC website with Khmer and English subtitles. The Supreme Court Chamber's (SC) judgment on appeals in Case 001 against Kaing Guek Eav affirmed the Trial Chamber’s (TC) decision to compile and post statements of apology and acknowledgement of responsibility on the ECCC's official website. The video is available at: http://www.eccc.godv.kh/en/video/apology.

On October 23 the TC announced in the tribunal's press release that effective November 5 it would reduce the number of hearings from four to three days a week and conduct the proceedings from Mondays through Wednesdays due to lack of staff. Because of financial constraints, the international staff was reduced to half its number and the chamber experienced difficulties as a consequence of not having enough staff to conduct work.

On November 8 the ECCC TC held a hearing regarding the most recent medical expert report written by Professor John Campbell to determine Ieng Sary’s health status and fitness to stand trial.

On November 13 the ECCC SC held a hearing on the prosecution’s appeal against Ieng Thirith’s release conditions. The prosecution and defense lawyers for Ieng Thirith made submissions to the chamber, after which Ieng Thirith and her daughter Ieng Vichida (who is also her guardian) were questioned by the Supreme Court's judges.
On December 7 the TC ruled on four of Ieng Sary's requests, which were added to the other requests of the defense team, on allegations of irregularities during the judicial investigation.

On December 14 Mr. Ang Udom, the Cambodian c-lawyer and Mr. Michael Karnavas, the foreign co-lawyer, were appointed by the Defense Support Section to represent a suspect named in the Second Introductory Submission submitted by the international co-prosecutor to the Office of the Co-Investigation Judges on November 20, 2008 which was part of the file in Case 003.

On December 17 the tribunal announced that the SC of the ECCC ordered a regime of judicial supervision of Ieng Thirith, including six-monthly medical examinations and a monthly check by the judicial police, according to its decision issued on December 14.

On December 19 the international co-investigating judge publicly issued information about additional crime sites in case file 004, which are located in Battambang, Pursat, Takeo, Kampong Thom, and Kampong Chhnang Provinces. For details of the crime sites, please visit the ECCC's website: http://www.eccc.gov.kh/en/articles/statement-international co-investigating-judge-regarding-additional-crime-sites-case-file-0

On January 18, the ECCC issued a press release in which the government of Japan pledged USD 2.5 million to the international component of the court. To date Japan has contributed over USD 78 million to ECCC, which is approximately 44 percent of total ECCC international budget.

On February 8 the SC issued its decision on the co-prosecutors' immediate appeal of the TC decision concerning the scope of Case 002/01. The appeal was submitted to the SC on November 7, 2012. The final decision invalidated the previous decision of the TC to separate Case 002 into a series of smaller trials.

On February 12, the TC issued a memorandum listing directions to the parties following the SC's Decision on Co-Prosecutors' Immediate Appeal of the Trial Chamber's Decision concerning the Scope of Case 002/01.

To deal with the uncertainty surrounding the scope of the proceedings in Case 002 and to minimize delays in the proceedings, the TC held oral hearings on February 18 and 19. These hearings enabled parties to make submissions regarding the scope of the trial.

On February 21 the Defense Team for a suspect in Case 004 issued a press release entitled “Fair Trial Threatened in Case 004”. This press release stated that the court administration “is unable or unwilling to provide the support necessary for the defense team to ensure the fair trial rights of [their] client…”

On February 26, the ECCC Public Affairs Office issued a Press Release on the Revised ECCC Budget for 2012-2013. The new revised budget is USD 69.6 million.

On February 28, the OCIJ issued its statement on Case 003. According to the International Co-Investigating Judge's statement Case 003 “remains open and the investigation of alleged crimes are proceeding.” According to International Co-Investigating Judge, victims of the alleged crime sites are able to apply as a witness, civil party, or complainant. The National Co-Investigating Judge’s statement provided that he will continue to take procedural measures as provided in the Internal Rules at the appropriate time and other submissions by the Co-Prosecutors may be received after February 7, 2013.

On March 1 Ms. Zainab Hawa Bangura, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, welcomed the decision of the Khmer Rouge Tribunal to prosecute the crimes of sexual violence committed during the Khmer Rouge.

On March 14 Ieng Sary, former DK deputy Prime Minister for Foreign Affairs, died at the age 87 at the Khmer Soviet Friendship Hospital. Ieng Sary had been hospitalized since March 4, 2013. Following Ieng Sary’s death the TC issued its decision to terminate all proceedings against the accused. According to Article 7(1) of the Cambodian Code of Criminal Procedure and the Internal Rules 23bis (6) of the ECCC, death extinguishes any criminal and civil action.

On March 29 the TC announced that Nuon Chea was fit to stand trial and that Case 002 would be severed. The TC also announced that the subject matter for Case 002/01 would be the charges in the Closing Order related to:

1. The forced evacuation of Phnom Penh in April 1975
2. The second phase of forced population movement initiated in September 1975
3. Execution of Lon Nol soldiers at Tuol Por Chrey execution site in Pursat province

On April 2, the ECCC issued a press release stating that the Co-Prosecutors have submitted their investigation into the death of Ieng Sary on March 14, 2013 at the Khmer Soviet Friendship Hospital. The report was concluded that Ieng Sary’s death was from natural causes.

On April 2, the ECCC Trial Chamber issued its Second Decision on Accused Nuon Chea’s Fitness to Stand Trial. According to the decision, Nuon Chea is fit to stand trial. At the same time, the Trial Chamber denied the Defense request “to order additional mental and physical examinations of the Accused and to permit the participation of the Accused in the trial proceedings from the Detention Facility.” The Trial Chamber also directed the Medical Unit and Detention Facility to implement the recommendation of the Medical Experts.

In a press statement issued by the OCP on June 6, Kaing Guek Eav, alias Duch, was transferred from the ECCC detention center to Kandal Provincial Prison to serve the remaining prison term.

On June 14, Sou Met, the former Khmer Rouge air force commander and suspect in the Khmer Rouge Tribunal Case 003, died of diabetes and high blood pressure in Battambang Province.

On June 19, the ECCC’s press statement says that the Australian government announced to contribute another AU$ 3.25 million to the international component of the ECCC in order to deliver justice to the Cambodian people. To date, the Australia’s financial assistance reaches AU$ 23 million.
The ECCC concluded its hearing on 23 July 2013, ending 212 hearing days in total for Case 002/01. Throughout these hearing days there were 3 expert witnesses, 52 fact witnesses, 5 character witnesses and 32 Civil Parties providing testimony on the charge of crimes against humanity in Case 002/01 against current accused person, Nuon Chea and Khieu Samphan, which focused on “the forced movement of the population from Phnom Penh in April 1975 and later from other regions (phases one and two), and the alleged execution of Khmer Republic soldiers at Toul Po Chrey in Pursat Province.”

While there has been speculation on how many mini-trials will be conducted by the TC after its conclusion of Case 002/01, on 23 July 2013 the ECCC’s SCC held that the trial hearing of Case 002/02 “shall commence as soon as possible” with a minimum charge related to “S-21, a worksite, a cooperative, and genocide”. The SCC further instructed the Office of Administration to “explore the establishment within the TC of a second panel of national and international judges to hear and adjudicate Case 002/02.”

The ECCC’s budget seemed likely to sustain due to the pledge made by the Royal Government of New Zealand on 9 August 2013. The pledge in the amount of NZD 200,000 was made for the support of the national side of the Court. On 21 August, The EU ambassador to Cambodia Jean-Francois Cautain announced that the European Union will provide another contribution of 3 million Euros (USD 4 million) to the international component of the Khmer Rouge Tribunal.

On September 16th, Andrew Cayley, an International Co-Prosecutor at the ECCC resigned due to personal family matters in the United Kingdom. His resignation happened in the midst of the financial and administrative crisis at this Court.

On September 18th, Spokesperson for UNAKRT announced that “The United Nations has successfully worked with a group of major donors to secure their authorization to make a further loan to the national component of the ECCC for the payment of arrears of national salaries.”

B. Legal Response

This year the Legal Response Team made significant achievements in responding to requests made by the OCP, OCIJ, defense team and others. The team provided a total of 45,494 pages of documents and 266 photos.

In April, a group of four French judges, a prosecutor, and a clerk at the Tribunal de Grande Instance de Paris (the court in Paris) approached DC-Cam to conduct documentary investigation in a case concerning a former President of the Assembly during the Lon Nol regime who was allegedly killed by the Khmer Rouge. DC-Cam gave a presentation on how to use DC-Cam’s databases (and how to search documents), to the team. The Response Team also assisted in conducting historical documentary research for the court in Paris. As a result, the Response Team was able to provide 41 files that numbered approximately 929 pages.

Mr. Christopher Dearing supervised 10 legal associates (law students)\(^5\) and 4 associates from various U.S. and foreign institutions. The law students conducted the following research on:

- Victim and civil party testimonies before the ECCC for the purpose of informing DC-Cam’s creation of genocide education materials and permanent exhibit, which are being proposed as judicial reparations in Case 002;
- Drafting of model legislation to address private collections of cultural property in Cambodia. The associates researched over a dozen countries’ legal and regulatory approaches to protecting and managing cultural property for the purpose of advising the National Museum of Cambodia on legal courses of action in protecting and managing private collections of cultural property. They produced a legal memorandum encompassing her foreign and international legal research, as well as a draft licensing form, and suggestions on proposed legislation.
  - Cambodian judges understanding of Cambodia’s problems with rule of law.
  - The ECCC Internal Rules.
  - The ECCC’s approach to judicial reparations in the context of international precedence (i.e., the ICC).

C. Victim Participation

The VSS of the ECCC, together with various NGOs including DC-Cam, has engaged in an ongoing discussion over possible reparation mechanisms. DC-Cam proposed that a number of activities be considered as collective and moral reparation, as defined by the ECCC’s Internal Rules. On 5 October 2012, the latest discussion was focused upon detailed plans of responsibilities, prioritized projects, and fundraising strategies.

On December 19 the ECCC OCIJ published information about the additional crime sites in Case File 004. Among those sites investigated by the OCIJ, DC-Cam assisted thirty-one civil parties and complainants to file Victim Information Forms to the Khmer Rouge Tribunal (KRT): seven civil parties and six complainants report about crimes committed at Kraing Ta Chan Security Center in Takeo Province; fourteen complainants report about crimes committed at Tuol Seh Nhauv Pits and Prey Krabao Execution Site; three complainants report about crimes committed at Veal Prison in Pursat Province; and complainant reports about crime committed at Thnal Bek Execution site in Kampong Cham Province.

\(^5\) DC-Cam’s 2013 summer legal associates included: Kristine Beckerle from Yale Law School, Katherine Culver from Yale Law School, Young-Hee Kim from Yale Law School, Kate Langford from University of Pittsburgh Law School, Jamie Nystrom from Seattle University School of Law, Lubhyathi Rangarajan from Berkeley School of Law, Barbara Serrano from Seattle University School of Law, Ashlee Stetser from Vermont Law School, Dana Swanson from Fordham University School of Law, Kathryn Carroll from St. John’s University School of Law, Ajay Menon from American University Washington College of Law and Pavan Nagavelli from Suffolk University Law School.
In collaboration with the Witnessing Justice Project, the Victim Participation Project (VPA) invited eleven civil parties and complainants, as well as thirty-three villagers to Phnom Penh to observe the ECCC’s court proceedings. The hearing focused on two major issues: Ieng Sary's health status and the testimonies of two civil parties, Ms. Toeng Sokha and Ms. Pech Srei Phal. A full report is available at: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Tribunal_Response_Team/Victim_Participation/PDF/Confronting_the_Past_through_the_lens_of_Justice.pdf

From December 26 to 30, the VPA travelled to Srayang and Kulen Commune, Kulen District, Preah Vihear Province to bring ECCC updates to the people in the area. Through this outreach effort, the project team collected eighteen survivor stories from those participating in the outreach meetings.

DC-Cam has formalized collaboration with the civil party Lead Co-Lawyers (LCLs) on two judicial reparation projects for victims, which include a permanent exhibition on forced transfer in five provincial museums and an additional chapter on forced transfer in the Teacher’s Guidebook: Teaching the History of Democratic Kampuchea (1975-1979) and Distribution of DC-Cam textbook A History of Democratic Kampuchea (1975-1979). DC-Cam and LCL are the sole designers of the project. DC-Cam is also the sole developer and implementer of the projects and responsible for fundraising for the projects. LCLs, in consultation with Civil Party Lawyers, are solely responsible for filing the Final Claim for reparations before the ECCC.

During the reporting period, two civil parties named Sar Sarin and Nou Hoan, whom VPA had helped filing civil party applications before the ECCC were called to testify before ECCC’s Trial Chamber. In March 2013, the civil party Lead Co-Lawyers had submitted requests for government’s approval on a number of projects deemed to be reparation projects and non-judicial measures for victims. The requests were approved by the government on 11 June 2013. Although the government's approval did not include financial contribution, it shows government's keen support for this initiative and that the initiative could be immediately implemented when it has funding support. The approval includes:

1. Designation of May 20th as the National Day of Remembrance,
2. Incorporation of history of Democratic Kampuchea into the national school curriculum from Grade 7 to Grade 12 and into the foundation years of higher education institutions, and
3. The Government shall issue a separate directive to relevant government institutions and local authority with regards to the implementation of a number of reparation projects and non-judicial measures.

VPA continued to work with both the VSS and the LCL on implementing the reparation projects and non-judicial measures. These projects include:
- A permanent exhibition on forced transfer;
- An additional chapter on forced transfer in the Teacher’s Guidebook: Teaching the History of Democratic Kampuchea (1975-1979) (to include the Tuol Po Chrey killing site) and distribution of DC-Cam’s textbook A History of Democratic Kampuchea (1975-1979).

VPA team made a considerable achievement in translating into English 41 victim information forms and 56 survivor stories. To assist the transcription of 574 interviews, DC-
Cam employed five part-time volunteers under the supervision of Mr. Kimsroy. Since the transcription work started in September, there have been 11 done.

D. Fair Trial

The Fair Trial Project seeks to provide legal outreach material in Khmer language to students and the public. It also fosters a culture of legal scholarship among Cambodian law students and monitors and confidentially reports on issues of legal concern at the ECCC to ensure strict adherence to international due process standards.

Trial Observation Booklet

This year the project produced 10,000 copies of 10 monthly booklets (Issues 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23). The booklets were available in various school and university libraries and the national assembly and senate. It was also distributed to Library of French Cultural Center as well as students and villagers through Genocide Education program. The online version of the booklet is available at: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/ECCC_Trial_Observation/ECCC_Trial_Observation_Booklet.htm.

CTM Blog Assistance

The project also provided assistance to CTM blog writer Doreen Chen and Edward Gough with regards to the spelling of names and places in order that the report be as accurate as possible. The team continued to observe the trial hearing at the ECCC on a daily basis, presented ECCC related topics to local universities, and authored various legal updates and analytical documents.

Presentations at Universities

During the year, the team presented their court observation findings and views to students in 17 universities in Phnom Penh and provinces around the country. Among other things the presentation focused on:

- The charges in Case 002
- The Severance Order in Case 002
- The proceedings in Case 002/01
- The expectation to issue a verdict in Case 002/01
- The obstacles of prolongation in proceedings

Popular questions raised during the session included:

- Would there be Cases 003 and 004 in the future?
- Was the truth revealed before Ieng Thirith was released and Ieng Sary had died?
- Since everyone knows that KR leaders committed crimes why did the ECCC spend so much money and time on the trial?
- What are the advantages and disadvantages of the ECCC?
- Did Pol Pot force his fellows to commit genocide?
- Why did the KR starve and torture people?
- How did the KR regime collapse?
- While Pol Pot wanted to eliminate all classes during the KR reign of terror there were two kinds of class—new people and base (old) people, why?
- How many more documents are needed for Case 002?
- How many zones were there during the KR?
- Which zone had the highest fatality rate?
- Will Ieng Thirith be tried since she was found mentally ill?
- Why does it take so long for ECCC to try the cases?
- Why did the government ask for assistance from the international community to try the KR leaders?
- Will there be a Cases 003 and 004?
- What were the benefits of the KR regime?
- Who were the KR leaders besides Pol Pot?
- What are the benefits of the KR Tribunal?

Dissemination of Information

In addition to their observation and producing Observation booklets, members of the project wrote a total of 26 articles in Khmer, translated some of them into English, and published them in a high circulation daily local newspaper Reaksmei Kampuchea. All the articles are available through DC-Cam website: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/ECCCTrial_Observation/Khmer_Version.htm

The articles focused on the following issues:

- Legal and medical issues surrounding the release of Ieng Thirith
- Ieng Sary’s ill health and its legal implications
- Severance of proceedings due to time constraints
- Forced transfers during the DK
- Applications of different laws at the ECCC
- The meaning of case 002/01
- Right to be presented at trial
- Supreme Court Chamber annuls Trial Chamber's decisions serving Case 002 into mini trial
- Finishing Case 002 through a new Trial Chamber establishment
- Ieng Sary’s death
- Weight and probative value of civil party testimony in support of the prosecution
- Khieu Samphan's seeking his release due to the slow proceedings
- Victim reactions to Nuon Chea’s and Khieu Samphan’s responses on evacuation and right to remain silence
- Trial Chamber warnings to the Khieu Samphan Defense Team
- Khieu Samphan’s remaining in detention even if found not guilty in Case 002/01
- Reaction of people to the issue of evacuation

Analytical Papers on CTM Website

The team translated the following analytical papers on CTM (www.cambodiatribunal.org) website and published them in Reaksmei Kampuchea newspaper:
Meeting with President of Kandal Provincial Court

On June 17, Fair Trial's project members along with 12 summer legal interns attended the meeting with Mr. In Van Vibol, president of Kandal provincial court. During the meeting, the president briefly introduced the court’s background and its challenges to the team. Kandal provincial court is considered one of the four model courts in Cambodia by the Cambodian government. However, he continued that the court presently is trying its best to ensure that people would be satisfied by its work and have more trust in the court’s independence. He then provided an opportunity for Q&A session for the participants who wished to ask him any question about the court. The participants asked him questions in regard to the court’s work, legacy of ECCC and its benefit to the domestic court in the future. The President finally informed the group that this year both civil and criminal cases in Kandal provincial court are decreasing comparing to previous years.

E. Witnessing Justice: The Cambodia Law and Policy Journal (CLPJ)

The mission of the CLPJ is to promote critical legal scholarship on issues pending before the ECCC as well as other urgent legal, social, and development issues facing Cambodia and the Southeast Asian region.

The team communicated via email advertisements (in English and Khmer) to all universities, law schools in Cambodia, law firms, NGOs in Cambodia, and law professors in the United States (Link to the announcement in English: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Witnessing_Justice/The_Cambodian_Law_and_Policy_Journal/Poster_The_Cambodia_Law_and_Policy_Journal.pdf). They met with a few institutions including the East-West Management Institute, Royal University of Law and Economics English-Language-Based Bachelor of Law, to gather information for journal stakeholders, advertisements, and a legal writing clinic. The team also began discussions with pro bono lawyers who may assist with editing duties.

In March the team met with the President of the Cambodian Bar Association and obtained a tentative agreement of collaboration on a Cambodian legal research tool (website) as well as interest in receiving educational and consultative assistance for improving the rule of law in Cambodia. A follow-up meeting to define specific details of collaboration on research tool and education/consultation support is pending. In addition, the CLPJ team has provided six sessions of a legal writing program. Fifteen law students have participated in the program to date, four of whom are law graduates.

A trial version of the website was uploaded in June, although there remained some aspects of the website that needed further development. The associate worked on writing up articles for the Journal’s website and on the layout/interface of the website. The recruited legal associate assisted in managing online journal, legal education program and social media for CLPJ website.

For a period of six weeks, starting from June 29, the CLPJ's Legal Education Program will conduct training sessions on English legal writing (from 10:00-11:30AM) and contract writing (from 12:00-13:30PM) for law students and lawyers. The sessions will be held on Saturdays. There were 16 students accepted to the English legal writing session and 11 students accepted to contract writing program.

DC-Cam's legal adviser Christopher Dearing put up three free online courses on: 1) Legal Writing Clinic, 2) Contract, and 3) Genocide Education on the website of Blackboard. He had presented these online courses to staff and had invited a number of students to take them. The target groups of these online courses would be enlarged to include legal practitioners and associates at various law firms in Cambodia in addition to students and teachers at various law schools and universities.

This year CLPJ team received 9 scholarly submissions acceptable to the print. They are:
- Acid Violence in Cambodia: Achieving Justice for Survivors
- Catch a Naga by the Tail: The Hidden Risks for Stability for Western Investors in Cambodia
- The Effect, Applicability, Interpretation, and Enforcement of International Law in Cambodia
- Avenues to Improving Workers Rights and Labor Standards Compliance in a Global Economy
- Enacting Denial Laws and the Freedom of Expression in International Law
- Making Reparations “Effective”: Challenges Facing Civil Parties in Case 002
- Internal Rules in the ECCC: The Good, the Bad, and the Future Legacy
- Preserving Cultural Heritage as a Form of Reconciliation

2. Documentation

Documentation is a long-term and tedious project which significantly contributes to many aspects of the justice, memory and healing process, to close the darkest period of Khmer Rouge terror for victims and the Cambodian people in order to move forward with strength and hope. This year DC-Cam collected a total of 3,841 pages of documents, 7 documentary films and footage and 117 photos.

A. Collection, Cataloging and Database Management

Cataloging and database management is an important aspect of documentation. Staff members are committed to working step by step including filling information on worksheets, entering data from worksheets into computer, translating data on worksheets into English and vice versa, entering English translated data on worksheets into computer, compiling listings of documents, digitizing hard copies of documents and so on.

The table below shows the progress of team’s work in addition to achievements made in the year.

On March 27, DC-Cam received a new four-page document on Ieng Sary's residence in Phnom Penh. The document will be numbered, catalogued, and keyed into our database.

On May 28, DC-Cam made a formal written request to Matheson Library of Monash University for a permission to access and reproduce selected archival collections. The request made to the Library was to specifically access and reproduce: 1) Prince Norodom Sihanouk Archival Collection; and 2) Professor David Chandler’s non-S-21 Archival Collection.

In early June, DC-Cam received a diary of a Khmer Rouge victim, Poch Yuonly, from his daughter Poch Viseith Neary. Neary decided to donate the diary to DC-Cam to preserve in its archives. The author who was a school inspector of the Ministry of Education living in Kampong Chhnang wrote the diary from 1975 toward his death around mid of 1976. The yellow-paper diary was about 100 pages, covered with a printed image of the author. The diary holds the account of the author and describes a tragic story of his family through the DK regime. It describes the evacuation of Kampong Chhnang and how his family was suffering from the hot weather and the lack of food. According to Neary, her father wrote the diary before he was taken away to a prison in August 1976 and executed a few months after that. The story was featured in both The Cambodia Daily and The Phnom Penh Post newspaper in the same month.

On June 12, Mr. Ung Veng Eang whose father named Ung Pech was one of survivors from former KR detention and interrogation center S-21 donated to DC-Cam a German Rolleiflex camera from 1930s-40s which was used to take photographs of S-21 victims. Mr. Ung Veng Eang was the only child among five children who survived the regime. After his father became the first director of Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum, Mr. Ung Pech used the camera to document the crimes committed by the KR at the former prison. The camera was then kept with Veng Eang after his father went abroad to receive heart surgery. He had kept the camera in the box since then. It could no longer be used for taking pictures as there was no film suitable to the camera. The donor decided to donate the camera to DC-Cam after seeing former KR photographer Nhem En was being interviewed on TV. He said he wanted to find out history of the camera. (See Appendix for news articles).
Also in June, DC-Cam published public statement on its website, Searching for the Truth magazine, and local Khmer newspaper to appeal for donation of archives relating to the KR and UNTAC periods. The public statement also reached out to all countries with representation at the United Nations. A detail of the appeal letter can be found at: http://d.dccam.org/Archives/DCCAM_Appeals_for_the_Release_of_Archives.htm (Please see Appendix for the appeal publication in local Khmer newspaper Reaksmei Kampuchea).

An example of the substantial impact of documentation is reflected in OCJ’s request to DC-Cam on 23 August 2013: “I am forwarding you a list of documents (280 documents in total) which we discovered in the DC-Cam website (http://www.d.dccam.org/Database/Lod/index.php). We can confirm that the court has not received these documents and would therefore appreciate if you could facilitate the OCJ analysts to review them.” See more in B. Legal Response Team

DC-Cam took one more step forward in expanding the scope of appealing for documentation donation by sending 191 letters to appeal for donation of archives relating to the Khmer Rouge and UNTAC periods to 191 country representatives to the United Nations based in New York. The sample of the letter is shown below.

After the letters of appeal were sent out, DC-Cam received the response from Second Secretary of Permanent Mission of the Republic of Armenia to the United Nations, seeking to promote cooperation and exchange between DC-Cam and the Armenia Genocide Museum and Institute (AGMI).

DC-Cam collected 41 new photos of the children of KR victims and former KR cadres, including the rare photo of one suspect of Case 004. Among 41 photos, 38 were collected through PA field trips and 3 donated by the son of Poch Yuonly.

6 Poch Yuonly was a professor in 1960s. He had written his personal diary since the day Khmer Rouge forced him to leave home till the day his life was taken away. His son gave that horrible diary to DC-Cam in the last quarter.
B. Book of Memory

DC-Cam is writing and compiling a book of records of names of those who died under the KR regime from 1975 to 1979 and those who disappeared during that period. It will also include a section for family tracing purposes. DC-Cam already has in its database up to a million names of those who may have died under the KR.

The book of records will include basic information relating to KR history, its security apparatus, its rise, and its demise. It will also discuss concepts relating to disappearance and its impact on the psychological well-being of survivors today. These names will help in family tracing efforts. The book will be distributed free of charge to commune offices in Cambodia, so that people can see the names of their lost relatives and search for names that DC-Cam has on record. The book can then receive comments from villagers about the accuracy of the information as well as family tracing requests.
This year the team continued to collect names from DC-Cam documents, crosscheck them to avoid repetition, and finding out whether there are links between names. The team input additional 758 worksheets into computer database. They recorded 79 names of people who died under the Khmer Rouge along with their biographies. They also received 20 requests for family tracing from Cambodians living around the world.

In October 2012, DC-Cam found missing relatives for H.E. Prom Sidhra who is currently working as a government official. H.E. Prom Sidhra wrote to inform DC-Cam that he found his relative, Bo Tep, a professor at Santa Clara University, USA. Bo Tep's name was published in the Cambodia's Daily's article dated October 10, 2012, portraying his successful search for family members through DCCam's database and among the recently donated photograph collection. H.E. Prom Sidhra requested DC-Cam to forward his contact information to Bo Tep so they were able to get in touch. Please find the news article here: http://www.cambodiadaily.com/archive/cambodian-in-us-finds-siblings-among-photos-of-s-21-victims-3666/

Sek Say, a daughter of S-21 victims Chan Kim Srung and Sek Sat, found out about her parents only much later through DC-Cam's publication. She was the oldest daughter in her family. In May 1978, her father Sek Sat, her mother and their new born son were arrested and sent to S-21. They were all later executed. Say, her sister, and all of her relatives who maintained relations with her parents were sent for re-education at the office in Kandal province. Through the publication of her photos and story in Cambodia's Hidden Scars, Sek Say has widely received attention and generous support from some individuals abroad to support her family.

Family Tracing Efforts

James Gerrand wrote in an email “I ask because a woman here and her cousin in Boston are trying to establish whether her husband was held and presumably died in S21. Apparently a friend has identified the man's photo displayed in S21.” Upon request as such, DC-Cam allocated few documents including S-21 execution log and confession. Both execution log and confession were sent to James. In response, he wrote “[t]his will be most interesting so it will be greatly appreciated if you can send the confession”. We did so.

Dara EA, leaving in California, asked for his cousin photo and confirmation from DC-Cam as to if it is true that his cousin died at S-21. DC-Cam allocated one document called S-21 execution log on which his cousin was known to be arrested, sent to S-21 and killed. Dara EA wrote:

I just cannot say thanks enough for your effort, not just for me, but for all Cambodians who have been [affected] by this atrocity. I can go on and on. It took me almost thirty years to come to a point that I could manage my anger to the Cambodian people. Please do not offended by my comment. I have been beyond that point now. My life is no longer a part of Cambodia today. My life has long gone beyond Khmer Rouge haunted spirit that was following for many many years. My cousin and I had done something together. I ended up with my family, and he ended up with Khmer Rouge killing machine. Anyway, I can go on and on. You may not understand it if you happen to be born after 1979. Thanks again for your effort. If I have anything that I can do for you, please do not hesitate to ask. I’m not going to ask for any of his confession etc.....It is not true anyway. I was going to ask for the picture. I don’t think I remember how he looked like. So it doesn’t make sense. Your finding for me shed the whole light for me that I have been thinking about him for quite sometimes. Thanks again
And May God bless you.

C. Promoting Accountability (PA)

Since the project’s establishment in 2000, the Promoting Accountability (PA) Project has played a pivotal role in fact-finding in an effort to promote justice and a better historical understanding of the DK regime. Thousands of lower and middle KR cadres and their family members were interviewed for this aim.

Four witnesses who were interviewed by PA project were summoned to provide testimonies before the ECCC’s TC in Case 002 about their experiences during the DK period. The witnesses include: 1) Suon Kanlor, former KR telegram operator of Central Zone, 2) Sum Chea, former KR soldier of Northern Zone Division, 3) Kong Kim, former KR soldier of Northern Zone Division, and 4) Meas Voeun, former secretary of Preah Vihear Region during the DK regime.

PA Database

PA team continued to review, summarize, and analyze interviews transcripts. In total the team summarized 251 interview transcripts, each of which produced approximately a one page summary. In addition, the team translated 428 summaries from Khmer to English and entered them into the PA database.

Transcription

The PA team completed transcribing interviews from Anlong Veng District and reviewed the spelling of each transcript. In total the team has transcribed 84 interview records, equal to 1,988 pages in Khmer language, and reviewed the spelling of 583 interview transcripts.

The team digitized 1497 tapes of PA interviews from Takeo, Kampong Cham, Kampong Speu, Battambang and Kampong Thom Provinces into MP3. The team also digitized 336 tapes of VOT interviews.

The PA team transcribed 34 interview records from Preah Vihear province and other places, making around 1000 pages of transcripts.

PA Research
The team searched for over 200 people who were involved with the KR naval division 164 and air force division 502 from Tuol Sleng confession documents and DC-Cam's database. The team then prepared the list of the people whom they plan to interview.

The team also conducted phone interviews with 19 former KR soldiers in Pursat, Battambang, Banteay Meanchey, and Oddar Meanchey provinces. The team interviewed them for their opinions about the Preah Vihear temple dispute during the course of oral submission at the International Court of Justice in the Hague, Netherlands, which took place from April 15 to 20.

The PA team also searched for the KR soldiers who occupied the area near the French Embassy in Phnom Penh when the KR took over the city on April 17, 1975. As the result, the team found 7 soldiers from PA’s interview transcripts. Those soldiers were from the KR divisions 310 and 450. They provided information about officers of the Khmer Republic including Long Boret, Prince Sirik Matak and other people who hid in the French Embassy when the KR arrived in Phnom Penh.

PA team also conducted research on former KR office K-17 at Boeng Trabek in Phnom Penh and wrote an article about the office. Later in the year, PA’s team leader Dany Long wrote an article in English about Sou Met’s recent death. Sou Met was a former Secretary of Air Force during the DK period. He was one of the suspects in Case 003 at the ECCC.

Field Trip

The team made a field trip to Malai district, Banteay Meanchey province between March 20 and 22 to observe the cremation ceremony of Ieng Sary, the KR Minister of Foreign Affairs and an accused in Case 002. There were around 500 people attending Ieng Sary’s cremation. Most of them were former cadres who used to work under the supervision of Ieng Sary during the DK regime (1975 to 1979), and after 1979 in Malai area. Currently, those cadres live in Malai district, Banteay Meanchey province, and Pailin province. Ieng Thirith also attended her husband cremation. There were several former KR commanders including Y Chhean, Salot Ban aka So Hong, Sok Pheap, Prum Sou, Chhit Mony, Phy Phuon. A Thai delegation also attended the ceremony.

7 Former Khmer Rouge Deputy Prime Minister and the Minister of Foreign Affairs Ieng Sary died on March 14 at the age of 87 at the Soviet-Kampuchea Friendship Hospital in Phnom Penh. His body was sent to Malai district, Banteay Meanchey province, where his resident was located, to hold funeral and cremation ceremony. Malai is a former Khmer Rouge stronghold area controlled by Ieng Sary before 1996. Ieng Sary was on trial for crimes against humanity and genocide crime. His death has terminated the proceedings against him at the ECCC.
From May 12-18, the team conducted a field trip to Koh Ker village, Srayang commune, Koulen district, Preah Vihear province. The team interviewed 26 villagers (5 females) in Koh Ker and Rumchek villages.

Dany Long went to Malai district, Banteay Meanchey province, to meet with Phy Phuon alias Cheam who was a personal bodyguard of Ieng Sary, Pol Pot and Nuon Chea for additional information on a story relating to Prince Sihanouk’s monkey. Cheam was a person who was responsible for taking care of Prince Sihanouk’s monkey that went missing during the prince's visit to the KR liberated Zone in 1973.

From August 12-14, the team traveled to Sampov Loun and Phnom Proek Districts of Battambang Province as part of the field trip investigation. The purpose of the trip was to follow and interview three former KR cadres at the level of district chief in former Region 5. The three cadres were not to be investigated on crimes charged in Case 003 and 004 by ECCC. As a result, the team could achieve their mission.

From August 16-19, Dany Long and Vannak Sok traveled to Samlaut District, Battambang Province where The team interviewed two KR members. The team extended the field trip to follow up on one case in Veal Veng District of Pursat Province.

From August 27-31, Dany Long and Vannak Sok traveled to Takeo, Banteay Meanchey, Siem Reap, Preah Vihear, and Odar Meanchey Provinces in order to follow up with five KR figures. Unfortunately, the team could only complete one case. Three others died many years ago and one could not speak due to severe illness.

Example of PA Interview Summaries
Ros Phat, A Khmer Rouge Cadre

By Dany Long

On August 12, 2013, Sok Vannak and I visited Phnom Proek district, Battambang province. There, we searched for Ros Phat, who was a former chief of Serey Sophoan district, Region 5, Northwest Zone. Unfortunately, Ros Phat died because of disease just three months ago (May 12, 2013). However, we found a photo of Ros Phat (attached) with his first wife and his daughter hang up in the wall of his house.

The photo reminded me that the Khmer Rouge cadres also are human being. They have their husbands/or wives. They have their own children. They have fathers and mothers. They have their sisters, brothers; and relatives. They love each other. Even though, they were brutal to others. They forced people to overwork in rice field. They forced to separate other family members. They did not offer enough food to people. They tortured people. They killed people by accusing people as enemies of their revolution.

Ros Phat’s second wife (photo attached), Pronh Tum, 54 years old and lives in Phnom Proek district, Battambang province and Tum was also a messenger of Ros Phat’s first wife’s name Phal told us that, the photo was taken in 1977 by Chinese delegation who’s came to visit Region 5, Northwest Zone. At that time, the delegation took several photos of Ros Phat and his family members. However, the photos were lost after then, and Ros Phat just kept only the photo. Tum added that a man in right hand side was Ros Phat, who died three months ago. A woman with a baby in left hand side was Ros Phat’s first wife’s name is Phal and his little daughter, Mom. Phal and her daughter died because of malaria in late 1979, when Phat and his family fled to Cambodia - Thailand border after the Vietnamese entered Cambodia in 1979. Phat married to his second wife, Pronh Tum in Thailand territory in 1980. Phat and his second wife have three daughters and four sons.

Phat was born in Angchaut village, Samlanh commune, Angkor Chey district, Kampot province. Phat volunteered to join the KR revolution soon after coup detat in 1970. Phat served as soldier in Takeo province. Phat was broken his eye when his unit fired against Lon Lol soldiers in Takeo battle field in 1974. After the Khmer Rouge came to power in April, 1975, Phat was in disable unit of Southwest Zone. Phat married to Phal in 1976. In 1977, Phat and his wife were sent to Northwest Zone by Ta Mok (Ta 15), who was chief of Southwest Zone. There, Phat was appointed to be a chief of Serey Sophoan district, Region 5, Northwest Zone. Phat’s first wife, Phal was become a chief of Toek Thla commune, Serey Sophoan district.
People's Reactions on Ieng Sary's Death

On March 14, DC-Cam conducted interviews both directly and on phone with 31 people including teachers, students, KR survivors, former KR cadres to gauge their opinion and immediate reactions on Ieng Sary's death. Ieng Sary's death had highlighted public concerns of the speed of the KR tribunal's Case 002. His death took place before any verdict has been reached in the important Case 002. In this case, the proceedings against Ieng Sary are ended. He was exempted from any changes prosecuted against him. Many of those interviewed by DC-Cam voiced their fears that the other leaders would die before the final judgment and they requested to the ECCC to speed up the trial and address the problems the court is facing.

DC-CAM's PUBLIC STATEMENT: THE DEATH OF IENG SARY

“It is hard for me to have any remorse for a leader within a regime that presided over the deaths of millions of Cambodian people. His death is no victory and it carries little value for the regime’s victims who patiently wait to see justice done. The United Nations and the government of Cambodia made a promise of justice and genocide prevention, not only to the Cambodian genocide survivors but also humanity. Administrative matters and political differences must not obstruct the fulfillment of this solemn oath. The victims deserve closure, and the Court must be allowed to complete its work.” Youk Chhang, Executive Director, Documentation Center of Cambodia

3. Public Education and Outreach

A. Genocide Education

DC-Cam's Genocide Education Project seeks to disseminate the history of DK to Cambodian students. The Center has since trained over 3,000 history teachers nationwide how to teach the material in an effective and objective manner. In partnership with DC-Cam, the Cambodian Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports has required that all Cambodian high schools and institutions of higher learning implement and teach Cambodian genocide education. The mandate also prescribes that all secondary-level history teachers attend one Teacher Training Seminar on DK History and Methodology in order to receive certification to teach DK history. National and provincial teacher trainings were held in 2009, and commune-level training program began in 2010. The team and the Ministry also launched the first training of university lecturers and for army officials and soldiers.

Teacher Training
DC-Cam and the Ministry of Education began training pre-service teachers in all six regional centers this December. From December 7-9 and 14-16, DC-Cam 113 participants, all of whom are second year pre-service teachers at Takeo Regional Training School. Participants came from Takeo, Preah Sihanouk, and Kampot Provinces. The training was divided into two major parts: presentation on KR history and presentation and model teaching on modern methodologies. Materials used in the training included: DK history textbook, teacher’s guidebook, booklet on case 002, magazine Searching for the Truth, and student workbook. In addition, the training also employed documentary films, survivor’s stories and guest speakers to give a more firsthand account of the KR history. Trainees received presentations on the history and teaching methodologies in the morning. In the afternoon, they had an opportunity to practice the methodologies.

Report:  http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Genocide/Training_for_Pre-Service_Teachers_at_Takeo.htm

A commune teacher training was held on August 17-22 at Provincial Pedagogical Training Center of Takeo. Fifty teachers (16 female) from Takeo and another fifty (10 female) from Kampot provinces attended the training. This training involved 6 national trainers (4 from the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports and another 2 from DC-Cam) and 4 municipal and provincial trainers (2 from Phnom Penh and another 2 from Kandal province). A survey was also made at the end of the training of participants.

On 7-12 September 2013, the Genocide Education team traveled to Kampong Cham province to conduct the 10th commune teacher training. There were 93 commune teachers who participated in the training which made a composition of 47 (19 females) from fifty schools respectively within Kampong Cham province and another 46 (18 females) from 29 schools within Kratie province. The training took place at the Kampong Cham Regional Center for Pedagogy. This training adopted all materials, methods and activities of the previous training. Training report is available at: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/Genocide/pdf/Report_On_Tenth_Commune_Teacher_Training_in_Kampong_Cham.pdf

On 23-28 September 2013, the Genocide Education team traveled to Kampong Thom province to conduct the 11th commune teacher training. There were 100 commune teachers participated in the training which made a composition of 50 (19 females) from 22 schools respectively within Kampong Thom province and another 50 (17 females) from 38 schools within Siem Reap province. The training took place at the Kampong Thom Provincial Pedagogical Training School.

Genocide Education Training for Army Officers and Students
On June 6, Genocide Education project held a one-day session on DK history and a discussion of Law of War with 250 army officers and students at the Army Institute, Kampong Speu province. This session marked the third training session at the Army Institute. The teaching of DK history has been an important step in enabling army students to engage in discussion of the events. Despite USAID's mission in supporting only programs relevant to civilians, DC-Cam brought forward this activity to expand its Genocide Education to reach out to the military sector in Cambodia. This program brings in national and international experts with varied expertise to speak about various aspects of the DK regime. Students learn about the roles of security forces in DK ideology, the historical context and impact of the KR regime and practice critical analysis of the history and impact of the KR regime.

The training is an entire day of lectures and activities, including group activities and question and answer sessions. This training represents a significant time commitment by the students and officers. One student described the training as important because it helps him to gain more understanding and insight into crimes committed by the brutal regime and that the training is valuable because the history of DK is limited in school. For details of the event, please visit this link: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Genocide/pdf/Seminar_for_Army_Officers_and_Students.pdf

Inauguration of Memorial and Textbook Distribution

On May 10, the Center inaugurated the anti-genocide memorial slogan and distributed A History of Democratic Kampuchea textbooks at Malai high school, Banteay Meanchey province. The event was presided over by Her Excellency Ton Sa-Im, Undersecretary of State of the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports. There were approximately 435 participants including officials from the Ministry, DC-Cam, the local teachers, and students. At the end of the inauguration, there was a question-answer session which allowed students to interact with the textbook author, Khamboly Dy, about the Khmer Rouge history. Some questions from the students are as follow: 1. why did not Cambodian appeal to the United Nations? 2. Why did KR purify people? 3. Why did KR allow women working equally like men? At the end of the program, DC-Cam staffs and teachers distributed of DC-Cam’s publications, the KR history textbook, Trial Observation booklet, Case 002 booklet, and Genocide Education Slogan poster, to mark conclusion. A report of this activity is available at: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Genocide/pdf/Report_Inauguration_of_Genocide_Education_Memorial_May_10_2013_Malai_High_School.pdf

B. Witnessing Justice

Obtaining the truth from the Khmer Rouge (KR) leaders was the general expectation from the Cambodian people when the ECCC was established to try surviving KR leaders. Under the umbrella of DC-Cam's Witnessing Justice Project, DC-Cam invited villagers, survivors and community leaders to attend the ECCC and receive necessary trainings to enable them to understand ECCC process at a greater depth. Upon arrival, a pre-hearing meeting was held to introduce the participants to DC-Cam and the ECCC, at which a film entitled Mass Graves near the Pagoda was screened. A subsequent discussion also touched upon their personal feelings regarding the meaning of justice as well as the process of forgiveness.

B.1. ECCC Visits

On December 3-6, DC-Cam invited 44 people to attend an ECCC hearing in Case 002 against the three surviving KR leaders—Khieu Samphan, Nuon Chea and Ieng Sary. DC-Cam extended hospitality and a warm welcome to the forty-four villagers and complainants who had traveled... from far and near. Afterward, they were briefed about the structure and nature of decision-making at the ECCC, the temporal jurisdiction (between April 17, 1975 and January 6, 1979), and the identity of the three KR leaders being tried in Case 002. The accused are being charged under both international and domestic laws. Thorough investigation and research has revealed the extent of the defendants’ involvement in the KR revolution, the hierarchical organization of the regime, the policies for creating cooperatives, the evacuation of people from the cities, and the subsequent evacuations of people from one place to another. The charges against the defendants take into consideration the involvement of the accused in the implementation of the revolution.

The film Mass Graves near the Pagoda was screened, depicting a touching case of a victim’s family getting to know a former KR cadre. Lieb and Vaing lost their father and uncle, respectively, at the hands of Kin, "a willing executioner who killed to preserve his own life." Two female participants commented on the film by saying that Kin seemed to take pleasure in the execution of people. When the participants were asked about their personal reaction to low-level KR cadres, such as Kin, some said they would take deadly vengeance on him. However, another participant pointed out that acts of vengeance would not bring their lost relatives back to life. This led the participants to discuss the possibility of forgiveness. Two participants from Preah Vihear Province commented that forgiveness is possible only if justice is achieved. A report is available at: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/Living_Doc/pdf/Confronting_the_Past_through_the_lens_of_Justice.pdf

On January 14-17 and March 4-7, DC-Cam invited 40 people, eighteen of whom were women, to Phnom Penh to observe the ECCC’s court proceedings from January 14-17 and March 4-7. The villagers had expected to witness the KR leaders on trial once they participated in the program. However, after the villagers arrived in Phnom Penh, they were quite disappointed to learn that the court was adjourned due to the hospitalization of Nuon Chea and the financial difficulties of the court. Consequently the villagers were sent back home without getting the opportunity to step into the courtroom. It is expected that these disappointments will become even more frequent in the future given the deteriorating health of the former KR leaders and the financial issues the court is facing.

DC-Cam made short interviews with eighteen people on their opinions on the adjournment and the proceedings at the ECCC. Generally participants were concerned that the KR leaders were aging and in poor health. Some came up with fundraising strategies to ensure the continuity of the legal process. More importantly these concerns would obscure their hope for justice. As indicated in the court observation the deteriorating health of the accused is becoming a source of great concern for Cambodians. The KR leaders Nuon Chea and Khieu Samphan had been in and out of the hospital several times due to their "severe weakness and fatigue" and "acute bronchitis" during weeks before the concerned trip.

From April 28-30 and June 3-5, DC-Cam invited 49 people, 15 of whom were women to observe the ECCC’s court proceedings. The participants were members of Kuoy and Tumpuon ethnic minority groups from Preah Vihear and Ratanakiri; and former KR members from Oddar Meanchey. Prior to their observations of the trial proceedings at the ECCC, the villagers were interviewed for their experiences during the DK regime and the loss of their family members and relatives to the regime. After attending the trial session, the participants stated that they learned new information from witness testimony as the witness talked about the KR leaders, his involvement with the KR revolution, and his roles as a trainer for security unit during the DK regime. They believed that the witness provided important facts about the senior KR leaders’ activities and that the witnesses were truthful in their statements about starvation. The participants also had the opportunity to hear the responses from two KR leaders, Khieu Samphan and Nuon Chea, currently on trial to testimonies of civil parties and expressed their personal view on the responses. In these visits, villagers were also taken to visit former KR prison S-21 to reflect their experiences through the KR regime.

DC-Cam team managed to conduct short interviews with about 10 participants on their reactions to the proceedings at the ECCC and KR leaders’ responses to the civil parties' testimonies. Generally participants were unsatisfied that the KR leaders denied their acknowledgement and responsibility for starvation and execution of civilians during the DK regime. The participants deferred to the court judgment and wished to see these leaders punished based on their roles and responsibilities during the DK regime.

On July 8-10, 2013, twenty-five villagers (10 female villagers) from Kampong Thom, Stung Treng and Koh Kong provinces visited ECCC’s premises and observed the trial hearing before the TC in the ECCC’s Courtroom concerning Case 002/01 against the accused, Nuon Chea and Khieu Samphan. Because the judicial process will become a thing of the past in the not-too-distant future, the villagers closely observed the trial proceedings the next day and afterward made reflections on whether the ECCC could meet their expectations and help them mentally. During the proceedings, the accused Nuon Chea made a statement regarding the voluntary evacuation of city dwellers. Fifteen interviews were conducted to collect thoughts on the proceedings and their recommendations to the ECCC.
B.2. Public Village Forums

This year DC-Cam conducted public village forums in eight provinces. The forums are intended for the participants to engage in a discussion on justice and related issues, pose questions, exchange views, give suggestions, and be asked to convey the insights they gain to their neighbors to maximize the impact of each forum. The forums also aim to encourage a dialogue between parents, teachers, local leaders and students about the history as a means to seek to understand the past history and to preserve a collective memory.

From December 17-19 the PVF Project conducted a forum with former KR members at O Sralao Commune, Malai District, Banteay Meanchey Province. DC-Cam team met for interviews with ten people in O-Sralao Commune about background information and perspectives before conducting the forum at Kiri Thomsat Pagoda.

Photos: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/Living_Doc/Photos/2012/Public_forum_at_Malai_District_Banteay_Meanchey_Province/index.html

From February 11-13 and March 18-20, the PVF Project conducted two forums with 200 Kraol and 20 Poar ethnic minority members at Sre Chis commune, Kratie province and Rorvieng district, Preah Vihear province. The forums were also attended by 100 students from the local secondary schools that had the opportunities to learn directly from their elders about their experiences under the Khmer Rouge regime. Due to the recent death of DK’s Minister of Foreign Affairs, the team particularly intended to use this forum to discuss with the villagers and collect their reactions concerning the death of one of the most important KR leaders who was being on trial. The team met for interviews with 17 participants, 7 of which are women, about background information, background to the villages, and perspectives on Ieng Sary’s death.

In Kraol community, the team observed that children understanding of the KR regime were divided into those who believed and those who do not believe in the atrocities of the regime. According to a villager, many children find it impossible to believe that a regime could have killed so many people and many do not even take notice of the ongoing tribunals. Following the dialogues, participants viewed the forum as important to expand knowledge about the KR history and suggested that such forums should be implemented across Cambodia. Mei Bien (deputy chief of Ampork village) and Len Pheak (chief of Phnom Pi village) expressed that the forum can play an important role in educating the younger generations about KR history.
Other participants such as Mr. Plit Peat admired this effort and viewed it as the means by which the younger generation can be equipped with a strong background of knowledge about their country, and thereby build a future for Cambodia. Two female students also remark that the forum should be used as a model for telling Cambodian history. It was extremely important to hear her neighbors' opinions on the KR for the first time. The female student, Srei Tauch disclosed that her father was part of the KR. She reflected the general concern of her classmates, many of whom had never heard about the violence of the KR regime. Da Katha said that after the forum she was shocked to learn about the extent of the atrocities committed during the KR regime. Neither her parents nor her teachers ever talked about this, and she emphasized that she was now planning to ask her parents about their experiences.

Reports:

On April 3-5, PVF reached out to the Kavet community in the Santepheap commune to examine how different ethnic minority groups have conveyed the history of DK to their children and whether they are informed of the ongoing legal proceedings of the ECCC. Kavet people mostly live in the commune of Siem Pang district in Stung Treng province. In addition to the forums, subsequent interviews were conducted with Kavet people to trace their origin and background throughout the socio-political turbulence of the past. The interviews covered their partial role in war and the KR revolution, and explored the extent to which Kavet people suffered as individuals or as a community. The team also recorded each respondent's perspectives of how they perceived education and how it contributed to the growth of their ethnic group.

For details please go to the field report below:
http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Living_Doc/pdf/Kavet_People--The_Struggle_and_Rehabilitation.pdf

On June 24-26, the PVF visited Trapeang Cho commune, Kampong Speu province. Students were divided into four groups with participation of elder villagers to discuss their personal accounts during the KR regime and the ongoing KR tribunal. Their discussion focused on DK period covered Pea Veang dam construction that involved thousands of people, execution in the District 29 (now Oral district, the insufficient food ration, and the total prohibition of religions such as Buddhism and Islam. The team conducted interviews of 7 forum attendees including students and villagers for their perspectives toward the forum and how they think the forum benefit them.
On July 29-31, the team went to Pech Changva commune, Baribo district, Kampong Chhnang province. More than twenty villagers and forty students (34 female students) of Prahpech Changva secondary school participated in this one-day discussion in front of Pech Changva commune hall. The main topics of discussion covered the construction of Kampong Chhnang airport and other related issues such as their personal experience during the Khmer Rouge regime and the losses of their family members. Because the construction of the airport was not completed, it was abandoned after the KR’s fall in January 1979. Thus, the discussion between villagers and students attempted to find the answer to the question: if the airport had been completed, would Cambodia be able to defend itself or would it plunge the country into a worse state of war with Vietnam? During the forum, participants made their own reflections on the KR airport project.

On August 26-28, 2013, the team went to Sochet commune, Sandan district, Kampong Thom province. The forum was participated by 120 participants (approximately 30 female participants). It is one of the most remote areas, where the population lives far from media access and cares very little about recalling their tragic history of the Democratic Kampuchea. Most argued that the Khmer Rouge’s irrigation system found in various locations in contemporary Cambodia was an ambitious attempt to increase rice yields for the agrarian society. During DC-Cam’s Public Village Forum, 120 participants argued that the success of this goal would have led the KR regime to rule with an independent and self-reliant economy. That was similarly stated in its four-year plan. This topic has thus drawn great interest from participants in Sochet commune, Kampong Thom province, and inspired a heated debate about where the projected rice production of the regime would be sent to and why people across the country were left starving between 1975 and 1979. The forum attempted to hear various views on the negative and positive sides of the KR’s legacy of rice export and mass hunger.

Sem Savin, 23, said: “This forum is very important in order to educate youth; it would be beneficial to have more forums in my village. I could learn about the entire history of the KR period. As I learnt from this forum, under that regime people harvested a lot of rice but they got only a watery porridge that made them too weak to do farming. I really don’t understand why the KR adhered to the ‘working hard but eating less’ mantra to treat people.”

On September 17, 2013, the team visited Samlaut district, Battambang province. Around fifteen former KR members and forty young villagers participated in the forum. The choice of this district stemmed from its history as a site for popular uprisings in the mid-1960s and then the safe haven from which to launch guerrilla warfare against Vietnamese troops and its puppet state, People’s Republic Kampuchea (PRK). Mired with this history, the team of Public Village Forum was eager to learn if these former KR members would react, either negatively or positively, to the public discussion of DK history and its inclusion into classroom. Then, the team attempted to understand their shared perspectives on the current trial against former KR leaders and other subsequent trial cases. To begin with, it’s important to understand the historical background to the Samlaut district before touching down on the discussion.

C. Cham Muslim Oral History (CMOH)

The team continued to distribute the Hijab of Cambodia: Memories of Cham Muslim Women after the Khmer Rouge, published in 2011, in Malaysia, fund raising, and interviewing Cham Muslims in the country. The team gave a talk about the book at Monash University, Sunway campus, and the University of Malaya. At Monash the talk was attended by students and some faculty members. They acknowledged that this topic was new to the university, but that there is momentum to learn about the Cambodian situation. She also went to meet the head of AirAsia Foundation in Malaysia.

On December 21, the talk which was organized by Department of Anthropology and Sociology at the University of Malaya was attended by faculty member Dr. Siti Nor Awang, some staff and undergraduate and graduate students. The talk focused on Cham Muslim women’s experiences under the KR, their way of coping with the past, and their current situation. Questions asked included: how the KR could do what they did to human beings; the reconstruction of ethnic, cultural and religious identities of Cham Muslim women and the community as a whole in Cambodia and elsewhere; and their current situation. Together with her research under the Nippon Foundation, the team leader conducted ninety interviews with Cham Muslims, representing both the old and the young generations, in nine Malaysian states. During the recent interviews, she also distributed DC-Cam's magazine Searching for the Truth to the interviewees.

On May 2-3, the team leader attended an expert group meeting on Access to Justice for Muslim Women in Conflict areas in Southeast Asia, in Bali. This meeting was organized by Asian Muslim Action Network (AMAN) Indonesia in collaboration with United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN Women) under Regional Programme on Improving Women’s Human Rights in Southeast Asia with support of Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA). The purpose of the meeting was to empower women’s role in seeking peace and justice and advocate their leadership role in these arenas.

The team leader also attended the 6th Annual Muslim World Conference on May 22-23. The conference was organized by ASEAN Muslim Research Organization Network (AMRON) and the Centre for Muslim World Policies, Chulalongkorn University’s Faculty of Economics and supported by Thailand Research Fund (TRF). Approximately 300 people participated in the conference. Farina So was also included as member of AMRON during the conference.

In collaboration with Asian Public Intellectuals (API) fellowship, the team leader conducted 10 more interviews with Cham Muslims in Ban Krua of Bangkok, Klong Khoo Cham of Ayuthaya province, and Ban Nam Chiao of Trat province. On June 16 Fadil, member of the Cham community and caretaker of old photos, donated about 120 photos of Cham in Ban Nam Chiao during 1970s to Documentation Center of Cambodia for exhibition and documentation.

In July Cham Muslim Oral History moved a big step forward when it received funding from the Air Asia Foundation for the Cham Identities as Social Enterprise Project (CISEP), for the period from July 2013 to June 2014. The objectives of the project are to preserve Cham culture and history, promote education and create an alternative development model to ensure the sustainability of the Cham way of life. A plan was outlined by DC-Cam with unanimous support from villagers who requested assistance in preserving their traditional skills and using the latter for educational and awareness creation purposes. The plan also included a preservation of an old minarete (locally called Seun) in Suy Khleang village.

Other than education, the project also aims at providing villagers with an alternative source of income to supplement their earnings from agricultural activities. This aspect of the project will include setting up small-scale enterprises such as a craft collective. Income earned from these enterprises will also be used partly to support the upkeep of the museums and improve infrastructure, particularly renovation of the former Khmer Rouge dining hall.

D. Public Information Room (PIR)

Activities in Phnom Penh
PIR received 931 visitors who read documents, requested books and magazines, watched films, interviewed staff members, conducted research for school, toured the center, and sought information about missing family members. We provided 611 magazines (Khmer and English issue), 307 copies of the DK History books, 312 copies of DC-Cam outreach booklet Genocide: The Importance of Case 002, and 290 copies of KRT Observation booklets.

Library Services

The PIR received 248 research visitors who came to do research, read Khmer Rouge documents and request books. Those research visitors came from local as well as international institutions including RUPP, RULE, PUC, NUM, ECCC, ICRC, APP, University of Redcands, Mengo Travel, Northern Illinois University, Ministry of Culture and Fine Arts, University of QLD (Australia), University of Washington School of Law, Hunclong Global University, Versailles University, Chulalongkorn University, Grinnell College, Northern Illinois University, University of Central Missouri, Swansea University, Macquarie University, and Keisen University.

The topics of research include education and outreach on KR history, Khmer Krom during DK period, antiquities trade in Cambodia and preliminary investigation into Australian investments in Cambodia, Khmer Krom during the Cold War/superpowers involvement in the rise of the Khmer Rouge, Cambodian-American refugee experience, memory of the Khmer Rouge, Buddhism and the Khmer Rouge Tribunal. For Cambodian students, they came to look for documents in supporting school assignments with regard to their study about Khmer Rouge history.

In October a group of four students from RUPP come to DC-Cam to request to read documents in our archives for their research on military action during the DK regime.

In November a Vietnamese student from Royal University of Phnom Penh came with her classmates to DC-Cam to conduct research on a topic of relationship between KR and Vietnam during the DK period.

Also in November a student from the International School of Phnom Penh named Ing Chanmony came to request several photos relating to food, children’ work, houses, and work sites during the KR regime. The photos come from DC-Cam’s publications such as the History of Democratic Kampuchea, Vanished, Still Lives, and the Teacher's Guide Book. In response to her request, we provided her with a few photos for her research paper.

In December a visitor from Texas conducted research about KR foreign policy or international relations under the DK regime. She spent about one week at PIR reading DCCam's publications, Searching for the Truth Magazine, and researching documents and films in DC-Cam's archives.

In January, researcher Adlina Eswboy conducted her research under the topic “Tuol Sleng Museum”. In response to her request, the staff provided DC-Cam's publication such as books and Searching for the Truth magazine. The team assisted her to access DC-Cam website for further information which could be beneficial to her research topic.

Also in the same month, there was a group of six Cambodian students who came to use PIR to work on research assignment, “Background of King Sihanouk”. The PIR staff recommended them to read an article in the issue 155 of Searching for the Truth Magazine (Khmer Version) and some other DC-Cam’s publications.

Viveka Bhandari used PIR office to finalize her Master research on the topic “Impact of the US bombings on Cambodia”. She read magazines, DC-Cam’s textbook A History of Democratic Kampuchea, DC-Cam’s published monograph Cambodia’s Hidden Scars, and other monograph at PIR.

A visitor from PAC named Pich Minea came to PIR to request for some publications and do his own research on the topic “Living condition of children and youths under Khmer Rouge period”. In response to his request, PIR staff provided him with the magazine, one copy of DC-Cam’s textbook, and asked him to access to DC-Cam’s website for further information about DC-Cam. In addition to referencing DC-Cam publications, there were also several foreign researchers from universities in the US, Japan, Switzerland, and Australia requesting for access to KR documents for their research ranging from publication during the DK regime to the KR tribunal.

On May 6th, 2013 a British visitor from Haknuman Film named Lan Master came to PIR and requested an audio Khmer Rouge song titled “We the youth are committed to follow revolutionary Kampuchea”.

A history professor from Texas Tech University came along with his research assistant from RUPP to PIR to read documents relating to Lon Nol regime and to use some other publications for his research under the topic of Lon Nol and American invasion.

PIR Selected Group Visit

On October 8 the United States Peace Corps training program manager met with Savina Sirik and Khamboly Dy to invite DC-Cam to provide a session on Cambodian history and the legacy of the KR and also discussed the possibility of inviting KR survivors to speak to the volunteers.

On October 8 Kok Thay Eng, deputy director of DC-Cam, gave a presentation about DCCam's overall project and activities, outcomes, and challenges that DC-Cam has faced in the past ten years. Sida was very pleased with the new narrative reports over the last four years and asked that DC-Cam present the report to Sida's Board of Directors during their visit to DC-Cam.

On November 13 DC-Cam’s director Youk Chhang met with Mr. Matthew Robertson, Second Secretary Political Section of the Embassy of Canada, and his colleagues. Mr. Chhang shared with the guests his insights on the current situation of Cambodia, the evolution of the rule of law, and the importance of preserving the past records that serve as the essential part of reconciliation in Cambodia. Following the meeting Mr. Robertson wrote an email of appreciation to the director and DC-Cam for the commendable and invaluable work that the center has accomplished thus far in seeking truth and justice for Cambodians.

On November 14 a group of four American exchange students studying a course entitled Gender and Development at Pannasastra University visited DC-Cam to learn about DC-Cam's documents regarding women and gender-based violence during the KR period. Savina Sirik introduced DC-Cam’s documentary entitled Khmer Rouge Rice Fields: The Story of Rape Survivor Tang Kim, to the group. The group then met with Dara Vanthan who provided a brief introduction to documentation at DC-Cam. After that the group met with DC-Cam’s director Youk Chhang to learn about Sleuk Rith Institute.

On November 26 a group of twenty-six people funded by Sida's training program entitled Human Rights, Peace, and Security visited DC-Cam and met with Terith Chy, coordinator for the Sleuk Rith Institute and team leader of the Cambodian Law Review Journal project. A DC-Cam documentary film Mass Grave Near Pagoda was screened for the visitors, following by a brief description of the film and overview of DC-Cam's work and activities. Terith Chy provided an overview of several key projects at DC-Cam including Promoting Accountability, Victim Participation, Victim of Torture, and Genocide Education projects. He highlighted objectives and activities of each project that reflect DC-Cam's overall objectives, memory and justice.

On November 30 a group of fourteen visitors (thirteen foreigners and one Cambodian guide) with Where There Be Dragons visited the center, watched our new documentary film entitled a River Changes Course and learned about her work and activities. Following the film screening, DC-Cam’s director Youk Chhang gave a short presentation about the film to the visitors. Mr. Youk Chhang raised challenges faced by Cambodia regarding land and water management. The visitors asked a few questions, “How is Cambodia’s reconciliation process different than that of other countries?” In response to this question, Mr. Chhang presented the visitors with a few of DC-Cam's projects such as the teaching of the DK history, museum, and the future work of the Sleuk Rith Institute. Another question was about Mr. Chhang’s article on U.S. President’s visit to Cambodia. Finally, the representative of the group commented on the film and thanked DC-Cam for arranging the film screening and the talk.

On January 8, a teacher from RUPP’s DMC guided a group of seven foreign students from RUPP to DC-Cam to ask for information about DC-Cam’s work and for assistance to a research topic “Impact of Khmer Rouge on Cambodian young generation. The staff gave them DC-Cam’s booklets and brochure and guided them to use DC-Cam’s website as a resource for their research work.

On March 1, DC-Cam received a group of fifteen students from Where There Be Dragons who learned about DC-Cam work and watched new DC-Cam's documentary film A River Changes Course. The team met with Savina Sirik, who presented briefly DC-Cam’s goals and activities and held a discussion about the activities afterward. The main purpose of group was to understand and be aware of the past history and current issues in Cambodia. On March 16, Jesse Millet, coordinator of the program wrote to extend his gratitude for DC-Cam’s presentation and the film which had inspired the students to look more deeply into Cambodia and the challenges facing the country.

On March 7, a group of twenty-seven students from the University of Agder, Norway, visited DC-Cam to learn about its work and activities, KR history, and watched the documentary film A River Changes Course. The team met with Kok-Thay Eng who provided an overview of DC-Cam work and discussed about the film.
On March 13, a group of twenty participants of Swedish international training program of human rights, peace and security (Indevelop Sweden) visited DC-Cam and attended DCCam's history classroom at Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum to learn more about genocide in Cambodian and DC-Cam's work in promoting truth and reconciliation.

In April, PIR received 19 visitors including students, journalists, and researchers who wanted to learn about DC-Cam’s work, its twin objectives Memory and Justice, and get information relevant to Khmer Rouge regime.

In May, PIR received two groups of visitors who came to learn about DC-Cam’s work and also learn the KR history through the lecture from DC-Cam staff. The first group comprises of 14 members from Trinity College Hartford, U.S.A. Lectured by Khamboly Dy, there was a long discussion including questions and answer about how the DK history textbook was officially included into the teaching curriculum for Secondary school students by Cambodian government, the reflection of DC-Cam on the long lasting process of ECCC, and many other questions relevant to DC-Cam work. After the long and impressive lecture, we showed them DC-Cam’s documentary film titled “A River Changes Course.” The second group consisted of 15 members. After a short welcoming and introduction to the PIR room, the visitors were screened the film A River Changes Course. Following the screening, there was a discussion between DC-Cam's director and the group.

On June 24, a professor from the Center for Cold War international History Studies, East China Normal University named Li Danhui came with his two colleagues to request for documents relating to the foreign relation between KR and other countries. The purpose of his request is to collect all documents relating to the cold war in Asian country for a PhD research and to store in the library.

On June 25, two groups of high school students from the University of Hawaii (14 students) and Small World Tourganak Tour (40 students) came to PIR to learn about the KR history and DC-Cam's work. Khamboly Dy, gave lecture to the groups, followed by question and answer session. During the lecture, he briefed about the history of DC-Cam, some key projects such as the Genocide Education project. There was a long discussion about challenges of how to include the textbook into school curriculum in Cambodia as well as how to conducted quality control at local secondary school.

E. Film “A River Changes Course” (Kbang Tik Tonle)

The Khmer title of the film, Kbang Tik Tonle, discusses the importance of water in Cambodians' lives. It means that if one holds a scoop of water, every single drop of the water has to be protected, because the river and the water mean life to the Cambodian people.

Twice a year in Cambodia, the Tonle Sap River changes course, while the river of life flows in a perpetual cycle of death and rebirth, creation and destruction. Working in an intimate, verité style, filmmaker Kalyanee Mam (Director of Photography for the Oscar-winning documentary Inside Job), spent two years following three young Cambodians as they struggled to overcome the crushing effects of deforestation, overfishing, and overwhelming debt. A breathtaking and unprecedented journey from the remote, mountainous jungles and floating cities of the Cambodian countryside to the bustling garment factories of modern Phnom Penh, A River Changes Course traces a remarkable and devastatingly beautiful story of a country torn between the rural present and an ominous industrial future. "A River Changes Course," "The Kill Team" Win Top Documentary Film Awards at San Francisco International Film Festival .

In January, A River Changes Course has been awarded the World Cinema Grand Jury Prize, Best Documentary Feature, and Tops Full Frame Winners: Documentary Studies Filmmaker Award at Sundance Film Festival, Atlanta Film Festival, and Full Frame Documentary Film Festival, in the U.S. Also, the film has been selected to international film festivals in the U.S., Germany, Korea, Australia, and Israel. Among those, A River Changes Course has been selected as a finalist for the Festival Grand Jury Award in Non-Fiction Feature Filmmaking, an annual component of The Los Angeles Asian Pacific Film Festival.

The film was also sent to the following film festivals:

Environmental Film Festival, Washington D.C.
Environmental Film Festival at Yale University
Lincoln Film Society - Season of Cambodia, NY, USA
San Francisco International Film Festival
Screening of the Film

In October special screenings of the film were held in Phnom Penh, Koh Kong, and Siem Reap. We also screened the film at the European Union Ambassador's residence, the United States Embassy, and LICADHO – Cambodia, a legal rights organization based in Phnom Penh. The film team, with assistance from volunteers, worked on preparing the screening. They prepared and distributed invitation letters to embassies, government agencies, ministries, NGOs, and the general public to the special screening in Phnom Penh.

The response to the film in Cambodia was overwhelming. Over 500 people, including 200 parents of garment factory workers, packed the largest theater in Phnom Penh, when we screened the film on October 11, while nearly 300 people attended the screenings in Koh Kong and Siem Riep.

All the families in the film came to the screening in Phnom Penh, including the family from the jungles in the Northeast - their very first trip to the capital city. Sari, Khieu, and Sav Samourn also participated in the Q&A session that followed the screenings and spoke of how happy and honored they felt to participate in the making of the film. Robert Denham, former chairman of the MacArthur Foundation and his wife Carlyn Denham, were also present at the screening in Phnom Penh.

After each of the screenings, many people in the audience spoke about how touched they were by the beauty of the film, how proud the film made them feel to be Khmer, but also how the film helped them to question issues related to development in a deep and meaningful way.

The film has also helped members of minority and indigenous groups in Cambodia to regard themselves as accepted members of the community. During the screening in Phnom Penh, one Cham Muslim woman told a story of growing up in Cambodia, but not feeling Cambodian. She was always shunned as being different and un-Khmer. The film helped her to understand that although she was Cham, she was also Khmer and that all citizens living in Cambodia were Khmer.

On 24-26 September, A River Changes Course was screened in Chicago, IL, USA. In a press release of the Cambodian Association of Illinois, the Sundance-award-winning filmmaker Kalyanee Mam said of the impact of the film by saying “Today Americans, Cambodians, and people everywhere are connected as citizens of a global village, whose needs and wants are inextricably linked through our daily exchanges of goods, services, and ideas. And while our experiences may be different our shared stories unite and empower us to pursue greater justice for people everywhere”. See link below: https://www.dropbox.com/s/lv1pw8igzt1itcv/Press%20Release-A%20River%20Runs%20Through%20It.pdf

In November and December, several groups of visitors watched A River Changes Course (Please see Appendix C for visitors' comments on the film). A group of five students from Lehigh University, U.S., requested to watch A River Changes Course, at DC-Cam. Following the film screening, the group met with director Youk Chhang and discussed the film.

Early in 2013, DC-Cam received numerous requests to hold special screenings at universities, organizations, and other venues in Cambodia and abroad. In Cambodia alone, in the first three months of 2013, DC-Cam screened the film to approximately 1,560 people. The audiences include villagers, students, NGO’s members, embassies' staff and academics. From April to June, the film was screened to 640 people. From July to September about 500 more people saw the film through our public and special screenings. These numbers exclude international audiences in oversea screenings. Special screenings were arranged both inside and outside Cambodia:

Highlight of A River Changes Course screening in Thailand

On June 20, 2013, a seminar with a special screening of A River Changes Course was co-organized by API Fellowships, the Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam), and the Master of Arts for International Development Program (MAIDS), Chulalongkorn University. The seminar was attended by approximately 100 people. The participants came from diverse backgrounds including academics, filmmakers, NGO workers, and embassy officials based in Bangkok.

The seminar was addressed by Mr. Youk Chhang, executive producer of A River Changes Course and executive director of DC-Cam. The discussion panel comprised Mr. Nick Deocampo, Director of the Center for New Cinema and API Fellow, 2001-2002 from the Philippines, and Ms. Premruudee Daorueng, Director of Towards Ecological Recovery and Regional Alliance (TERRA). The session was moderated by Dr. Jakkrit Sangkhamanee, Deputy Director of MAIDS, Chulalongkorn University.

Mr. Chhang not only helped the audience understand the content of the film and the problems facing its subjects, but also broadened their knowledge on the context and purpose of the film as well as common issues in people’s lives in the region and around the world. He also shared his experiences under the Khmer Rouge regime and highlighted the need to move on from being victims of the Khmer Rouge era. “These forums serve an essential role in affirming truth, memory, and reconciliation, but we cannot and we will not be Khmer Rouge victims for the rest of our lives. Globalization proves that Cambodia cannot dwell on its past. The conversation must move forward,” he emphasized.

Launching "Changing the Course" Campaign

In June, A River Changes Course launched it campaign called "Changing the Course." The goal is to bring A River Changes Course to 60 universities and villages across Cambodia in the next 12 months, and facilitate substantive dialogue in the most remote corners of the country. Through these screenings, Cambodians will be encouraged to analyze their current situation, and within their respective communities, determine how to respond to this rapid change. The film’s link on Facebook https://www.facebook.com/ARiverChangesCourse
F. Anlong Veng Community History

In December DC-Cam submitted a brief report on progress of the book Community History of Anlong Veng: The Last Day of the Khmer Rouge, to the Ministry of Tourism. DCCam's co-authors, Khamboly Dy and Christopher Dearing, finished writing eight chapters of the ten-chapter book. The researchers collected 320 interviews in which 200 interviews were summarized and translated into English. The team has been working on finishing the draft and planned to submit it to the ministry for review and comments. The authors are working on the last two chapters that detail the last days of the KR and extensive history of the Anlong Veng area. The book will also include information on the everyday life of people who live in the area today.

G. Khmer Rouge History Classroom at Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum

DC-Cam has reached out to Cambodians and foreign visitors through the KR History Classroom at Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum. The foreign visitors came from a variety of different countries including Australia, China, Japan, UK, USA, Germany, Korea, Belgium, Sweden, Ireland, Czech, France, Netherlands, Singapore, Colombia, and Austria. Activities of the classroom usually include the following: the class devotes its first section, which lasts about ten minutes, to introducing and screening the video footage; DC-Cam lecturers then lead presentations and discussions on various topics, such as S-21 Prison, DK security system, S-21 survivors' stories, Duch, his criminality and trial, and the reconciliation process in Cambodia. A Q&A session follows. The class is held on Mondays and Fridays at 2:00 P.M. and Wednesdays at 9:00 A.M.

The table below shows approximate numbers of visitors who attended KR History Classroom, composition of visitors and possible occupation of visitors.

Selected comments from class participants:

Very good speaker, informative, knows a lot, maybe talk more about what happened before the KR (the Vietnam War? Bombing in Cambodia?) so we can understand how this could happen. Talk more about life of everyday people—wouldn’t have left their home towns much? Thank you. – Laurie, England.

Thanks a lot for the informative and interesting "class". – Mike, Switzerland.

I wish with all my heart that all your efforts towards teaching what happened brings peace to your people and everybody on this planet. Thank you. And great exposition. – France, Mexico.

Very informative talk, very balanced views. I hope that your country can overcome such a horrible loss. – Jerri, England.

Very interesting Q&A session. It is a good initiative so that foreigners can learn more about what really happened in Cambodia at the time. We think it would be nice if you could start the presentation with more information about the KR and the event chronologically. – Robri & Katren, Belgium.

Very informative talk. Particularly impressed that the speaker had spoken with Duch + could comment on him + his demeanor + attitude now. Thank you. – Catherine, Wales.

Wonderful details and excellent spokesperson. – Jeff, Australia.

Very interesting to learn about the way the KR era is being taught in schools- Savina gave a very balanced account of the history of this period—it is interesting to observe how difficult it is to take the politics out of the topic—but she's very good at doing this! Thank you for a wonderful discussion. – Alex, UK.

We greatly appreciate the opportunity to have learned about Jane’s work and a local perspective on perpetrator integration. We look forward to learning more. – Eugene Knol, The Netherlands.

Great informative and educational lecture. Please keep it up and continue to spread this important knowledge. – Astra Renwick, Canada.

It was very helpful to have someone to ask questions. Our knowledge and understanding of Cambodia’s history and the Khmer Rouge is greatly improved because of this. It’s very important that people are educated about these events, so that we can understand how they happen and hopefully avoid similar things happening in the future. Good luck continuing your important work. Thank you. – Angie & Yolanda, Australia.

Visiting S-21 is a very moving experience. This is a vitally important place in reminding people of these terrible events. It is a shame more resources cannot be invested in this museum. Keep up the good work. – Sam Bruce, UK.
Thanks for the excellent presentation, you gave us lots of information and it was interesting to hear about how important it is to integrate this into the education system. – Sophia, England.

Great footage that should be shared. Very informative and good for educational purposes. Every person visiting this site should spend the time to view this. Only feedback is for receptionists to inform tourists about the time the movie is shown so they can plan their visit and not miss out. The Q & A is brilliant. Keep on doing this and raise awareness. Thank you. --Johanne, Sweden.

Words cannot express the sadness I feel. My heart goes out to the Cambodian people. May we never forget this place. To a brighter future. – Barry Wadden, Ireland.

Thank you. The Talk was very educational and made me appreciate what happened here only a short time ago. It is good that the younger generation is being taught about this within the curriculum. The talk was well delivered. Polite and willing to answer questions. Thanks. --Steph & Jodie Mane, UK.

What an incredible history lesson. Thank you for educating all the people visiting your country as well as the younger population of Cambodia. May we never forget what we are capable of. May we learn from history. – Wilma Holgerson, USA.

It is very important that you keep telling about the horrible past to avoid anything like that to happen again. Thank you for your time and valuable information. I like your present country very much. – Suen, Denmark.

I came back for a 2nd day to join the class, and am very glad that I did it. The "teacher" is very well informed and answered all my questions. Very informative to learn how the Cambodians are trying to make sure that this horrible and inhuman period is never forgotten and that we all should learn from the past. – Chrisna, Netherlands.

It was such a dark time for Cambodian people. Walking around, reading and seeing photos, I feel so painful for the people. They were innocent, harmless people, including children, and that is the most terrible part. Human race should not suffer from anything like this again. – Minh Pham, Vietnam.

This genocide is one of the worst. But why did the trials take so long to start? We knew they were guilty. It’s sad to see the faces of the victims. It makes everything so real. -- Audrey Hunger, Canada.

Thank you for inviting us I to learn about intimate detail of Cambodia’s recent past. I am heart-broken for the families who lost everything and for Cambodia as a whole. Thank you for being so willing to share. I have a lot of respect for those who lost everything and still managed to raise up Cambodia through the loss. -- Shayna, USA.

Thank you for the class and lecture. It was very helpful being able to ask any questions about the Khmer Rouge. -- Marer, Germany.
It is very important that you keep telling about horrible past to avoid anything to happen again. Thank you for your time of valuable information. I like your present country very much. --Suen Eugen Hamsen, Denmark.

Thank you, a very informative and important talk. I had no idea how terrible the rule of Pol Pot was. --Andy Paulmer, England.

H. Group Tours at Toul Sleng Genocide Museum

In October, DC-Cam's director Youk Chhang provided an official tour of the Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum to Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (Sida) board members who made their official visit to Cambodia.

In late October Savina Sirik provided a guided tour of the Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum for Ms. Margaret Hsiang, the Cambodia desk officer at the United States Department of State in the office of Mainland Southeast Asia. Phalla Chea and Savina Sirik also accompanied the EU team on a pre-visit check for the visit of the President of the European Council at Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum in early November. The DC-Cam team provided historical background of the KR prison site to the EU team for their information in advance of the visit.

In November, DC-Cam invited an S-21 child survivor, former prison guard, and a daughter of an S-21 victim to speak to two groups of visitors including Korean delegations and participants of the East Asian Conference for History and Peace, and a delegation from the U.S. Holocaust Museum in Washington, DC. The survivor and prison guard shared their experiences at S-21, followed by questions from participants. The S-21 victim's daughter spoke about how the loss of her father to the KR regime has affected her life until today and the way she has coped with this painful experience.

In March DC-Cam's director Youk Chhang provided an official tour of the Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum to high officials from the US and other countries.

On May 7, Savina Sirik provided a tour to two people from the Security Mission of Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation at Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum.

On May 8, DC-Cam's Director Youk Chhang and Savina Sirik provided a tour to Ambassador of Israel, Mr. Simon Roded and his spouse, at Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum. DC-Cam Second.

On May 30, DC-Cam's Director Youk Chhang provided a tour to former U.S. President's daughter Chelsea Clinton and her team at Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum.
I. Other Activities at Toul Sleng Genocide Museum

The Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum provided space and support for two DC-Cam exhibitions per year for the past several years. The museum is visited by about 300 people each day. DC-Cam launched a photo exhibition and received a more than a thousand visitors in the year.

DC-Cam reprinted the photos of exhibition entitled "Senior Khmer Rouge Leaders" because the old photos were damaged and the color had faded. Captions were also reprinted. They were for DC-Cam's exhibition at Building D entitled "Justice and Responsibility" for the color and script were no longer viewable.

The museum team has been working with Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum to install a memorial about S-21 Child Survivors. It would contain photos showing Cambodian soldiers coming to rescue S-21 child survivors in 1979.

J. Website Development

DC-Cam’s website was updated regularly with postings on new developments, such as every issue of Searching for the Truth magazine, Observation booklets, chronology of the ECCC, information about DC-Cam's activities (photos, reports and transcripts). This year the number of visitors who visited DC-Cam’s website reached 50081 of which 53% were new visitors. Visitors come from the United States of America, Cambodia, Germany, Australia, Japan, France, Thailand, the UK, Canada, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Vietnam, Indonesia, Sweden and Singapore.

K. Cambodia Tribunal Monitor (www.cambodiatribunal.org)

DC-Cam, in collaboration with the Center for International Human Rights, funded by the US Holocaust Memorial Museum, undertakes certain responsibilities associated with the CTM website, www.cambodiatribunal.org. This website serves to facilitate public access to the ECCC and open discussion throughout the judicial process. The achievement highlights are as below:

Trial Blogs

Trial bloggers, Doreen Chen, Edward Gough and Simon Crowther, consultants from Destination Justice, and Mary Kozlovski, a freelance journalist, attended hearing sessions in Case 002/01 and wrote reports in English. Together they wrote 123 daily reports on trial proceedings which were posted on the website blog. Please follow this link: http://www.cambodiatribunal.org/_archived-site/blog/archive/201301

Hosting Video of ECCC Proceedings

The CTM team captured all trial footage to be posted on the website. The team produced 515 footages of the ECCC trial proceedings (Khmer, English, and French), one video clip of public reaction to the trials entitled "People’s Reactions on Ieng Sary's Current Health Condition,” and supplied 489 photographs (both historical and current pictures relevant to the contents of the hearing reports) to CTM’s blogs to be posted on the CTM website. Local television CNC requested a copy of the trial footage in Khmer on April 8-11, March 25 and March 30 for their TV news which the team supplied. All footages were posted and are available at: http://www.cambodiatribunal.org/multimedia/trial-footage

The team provided a clip on August 6 of the session 1 via www.sprend.se link to Markus Strömqvist and Liv Weisberg, working for the Living History Forum, to produce a film about crimes committed under communistic regimes, which has one episode about Cambodia.

Backing up ECCC Documents

The team downloaded 2,905 files and printed 18,796 pages of documents in Khmer, French, and English from the ECCC’s websites. The documents consist of transcripts of the ECCC’s trial proceedings, documents from the Legal Documents Section, Practice Direction Section, Press Releases Section, Financial Information Section, documents from the Latest Documents Section (which is the sub-section of the Legal Documents Section), practice directions, Media Center Section news and the court reports.

Translation and Posting of CTM Articles

The team translated 29 articles and the Chronology of ECCC from English into Khmer:

1. Expert Witness David Chandler Begins His Testimony with Frequent Objections by the Defense
2. Constraining the Use of Impeachment Materials
3. Prosecution Conducts Productive Examination Despite Witness’s Hampered Memory
4. Defense Challenges Admission of 1350 Witness Statements In Lieu of Oral Testimony

CTM Website Screenings

Recognizing the importance of working with youth, DC-Cam, in cooperation with Northwestern University School of Law’s Center for International Human Rights, is making an effort to increase their understanding of the importance of ECCC proceedings by introducing the CTM website to schools and universities in Cambodian universities. At each presentation, the team showed a short film, answered questions about the history of DK, and provided a short presentation on the establishment of the ECCC, including an overview of the cases and key legal concepts.

Some of the workshops were covered by local daily newspapers including Reaksmei Kampuchea and Kampuchea Thmey and local TV station CNC. Schools visited include:

On November 8 the team conducted a website screening at Western University with the participation of 100 students.

On November 15 the team conducted a website screening at InterED University with the participation of seventy students.

Report: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/ECCC_Trial_Observation/CTM_InterED_Institute.htm

On November 17 the team conducted a website screening at Puthisastra University with the participation of 200 students.

Report: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/ECCC_Trial_Observation/CTM_Puthisastra_University.htm

On November 30 the team conducted a website screening at Royal University of Law and Economics with the participation of forty first-year-law students.

Report: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/ECCC_Trial_Observation/CTM_at_RULE.htm

On December 7 the team conducted a workshop at Svay Rieng University with the participation of 250 students.

Report: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/ECCC_Trial_Observation/CTM_at_Svay_Rieng_University.htm

On December 15 the team conducted a workshop at Build Bright University based in Ratanakiri with the participation of 120 students.

Report: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/ECCC_Trial_Observation/CTM_at_BBU_Ratanakiri.htm

On December 21 the team conducted a workshop at Build Bright University in Stung Treng Province with the participation of twenty students.

Report: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/ECCC_Trial_Observation/CTM_at_BBU_Stung_Treng.htm

On January 26, the team conducted workshop at Angkor Khemara University, Takeo province with participation of 300 students.
On January 30, the team conducted workshop at RULE with participation of 25 students. This is the second times DC-Cam was requested to provide training there.

On February 7, the team conducted workshop at Chea Sim Kamchay Mear University, Prey Veng province with participation of 600 students.

On March 22, 2013, the team conducted workshop at Angkor Khemara University, Pursat province with participation of 25 students.

On April 4, the team conducted workshop at Police Academy of Cambodia with participation of 130 students.

On May 30, the team conducted a workshop at Phnom Penh International University (PPIU) with participation of 400 foundation-year students.

On June 22, 2013, the team conducted a workshop at Cambodia University for Specialties in Kampong Thom province, with participation of 150 students.

On July 12, the CTM team conducted a workshop at Build Bright University, a private entity, upon request, with 100 student participants.

On August 15th, the CTM team conducted a workshop at Kampot Institute of Polytechnic. The team was accompanied by two Burmese human rights activists. It was participated by 100 students.

On September 5th, the team conducted their workshop at Bright Hope Institute in Kampong Chhnang provincial town. There were 100 students from various majors including Accounting, Management and Development who attended the workshop.
Below are interesting questions from the students during the workshop:

1. Pol Pot wanted to eliminate all classes during the KR, but why did he create two classes—New People and Old People?
2. How did the Khmer Rouge regime collapse?
3. Was the truth revealed when Ieng Thirith was released, and Ieng Sary died?
4. Since everyone knows that Khmer Rouge leaders committed crimes, why did the ECCC spend so much money and time on the trial?
5. Will there be Cases 003 and 004 in the future?
6. What are the advantages and disadvantages of the ECCC?
7. Did Pol Pot force his followers to commit genocide?
8. Why did the Khmer Rouge starve and torture people?
9. How many more documents are needed for Case 002?
10. How many zones were there during the Khmer Rouge?
11. Which zone had the highest fatality rate?
12. Will Ieng Thirith be tried since she is found mentally ill?
13. Why did the government ask for assistance from the international community to try the KR leaders?
14. What were the benefits of the Khmer Rouge regime?
15. Who were the Khmer Rouge leaders besides Pol Pot?
16. What are the benefits of the Khmer Rouge Tribunal?
17. What is S-21?
18. Why did the ECCC separate Case 002 into mini-trials?
19. Who are the accused in Cases 003 and 004?
20. When was the ECCC created and for what purpose?
21. Why did the ECCC face financial problems? What is the solution?
22. If all the accused died, would justice be achieved?

Below are some reactions from the students during the workshops:

A student from Build Bright University (BBU) in Ratanakiri: “The workshop improves my understanding of the Khmer Rouge tribunal.”

Chantry Sopheary, a student from BBU in Stung Treng University: “After attending this workshop, I am more confident to believe that what my parents told me about KR regime was true.”

Long Kim Hean, deputy director of BBU in Stung Treng: “I hope to cooperate with the team more in the future. This could enhance the social knowledge for the students.”

Ngoeun Pisith, M, student of InterED institute: “I have followed up with the ECCC from time to time, but have not really understood the process and its history. The presentation by the team today helps immensely.”

Monk student Tep Narong from Angkor Khemara University, Takeo: "Being one of the Cambodian people, I should know this dark chapter in our history very well. I hope to attend this kind of workshop in the future."
Sophy, from Takeo commented: "Prior to this workshop, I did not know much about the proceedings of the ECCC. But now, I know how the cases at the ECCC are being tried."

Borin, a student from Angkor Khemara University: "The presentation is detailed, and the information is very useful. I will share what I have learned with my family and friends."

Phon Peset, a student from Chea Sim Kamchay Mear University, Prey Veng: "The presentation provided both historical and legal information. I propose to have more presentation in the future."

A student from Chea Sim Kamchay Mear University, Prey Veng: "As I live in rural area and cannot access to information frequently, I am so thankful for the speakers for providing the presentation. It would be great if you can show some more documentary films about the KR."

A student from PPIU said: “I have heard the history of KR from my parents and other elderly. Now it is different, I have an opportunity to learn from the speakers about the DK and also trial of the senior Khmer Rouge with supporting documents.”

4. Research, Translation, and Publication

A. New Publications

John D. Ciorciari's article on China and Pol Pot regime was published online on June 24, 2013.

A book on “Lessons from the Cambodian Experience with Truth and Reconciliation” authored by Jaya Ramji-Nogales, Temple University - James E. Beasley School of Law and John D. Ciorciari, University of Michigan - Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, was translated into Burmese language. The authors are both DC-Cam’s legal advisors.

Rehan Abeyratne published an article Superior Responsibility and the Principle of Legality at the ECCC, in the George Washington International Law Review, Vol 44, 2012. Rehan Abeyratne wrote a letter of appreciation to Director Youk Chhang, and DC-Cam’s legal advisors, John Ciorciari and Anne Heindel, for their support, guidance, and assistance to the research.

B. Historical Research and Writing

The Witnessing Justice Project produced a draft of an outreach booklet on the KR former Minister of Social Affairs and an accused in ECCC's Case 002, Ieng Thirith, entitled A Face to Remember. The booklet features historical and current photos of Ieng Thirith and people's reactions to her release from the ECCC's detention center for her unfitness to stand trial. The booklet has been written in English and Khmer and is planned to be published next year for dissemination to generate discussion on the issue.

VPA project team finished the final draft of the photo book on Duch entitled When Duch Laughs which will be published together with survivor stories, rare photographs from S-21, Duch’s recent photographs, and the transcripts of Duch recent interview conducted by Savina Sirik and Dr. Kok-Thay Eng in 2012. The book is projected to be published by the end of second quarter 2014.

Kok-Thay Eng’s PhD research paper entitled From The Khmer Rouge to Hambali: Cham Identities in a Global Age was completed. It is being translated into Khmer language and will be published by DC-Cam tentatively in the third quarter of 2014. The monograph is planned to be translated and published in Khmer, French, and Arabic by DC-Cam.

Farina So completed her research on Cham Muslims in Malaysia and Thailand: Then and Now. It is being reviewed for publication on an academic journal. Ms. So also plans to expand her work to become a PhD dissertation.

Nean Yin completed a second draft of his research on Toul Sleng Genocide Museum entitled S-21: From Education to Torture and Back. The draft is being reviewed which would then be followed by additional research before the book can be published. The book is written in Khmer.

Sok-Kheang Ly finished the final draft of his PhD dissertation on Peace and Reconciliation Studies at Coventry University. His research focuses on the social, political, traditional, and religious activities in Cambodia that have contributed to reconciliation. Mr. Ly is planning to defend his dissertation in 2014. If successful the paper would be further reviewed and adapted for publication by DC-Cam.

Khamboly Dy is working a monograph on the development of genocide education in Cambodia since the 1980s in three parts: the initial efforts in the PRK regime; the challenges of genocide education from 1993 to 2002 at which time genocide study was absent from the school curriculum; and the subsequent formal and informal efforts, including DC-Cam’s work and collaboration with the Ministry of Education, to conduct training nationwide. He is working on his third draft.

Dany Long and Truong Huyen Chi are editing a research on Dak Nong-Mondul Kiri comparative education. This is a comparative research of critical ethnography of education in multi-ethnic highlands of Cambodia and Vietnam. It focuses on the effects of globalization on education in the Pnorng communities in both countries and how their education shapes the younger generations in the communities. Kunthy Seng, Pechet Men, and three Vietnamese researchers are contributing chapters to the edited volume.

Christopher Dearing and Khamboly Dy continued their research on Anlong Veng community education. This research will produce far more than merely a book for Anlong Veng’s community education and industry; the vision is, indeed, to create a community education... model that can be exported to other communities. DC-Cam aims to use this project as a pilot for developing similar curricula in other Cambodian communities. As stated above, Mr. Dearing and Mr. Dy just finished the first draft of the book.

DC-Cam further wrote many letters of support as an exclusive sponsor of Christine Su for her project on “building a comprehensive genocide, conflict and human rights program in Cambodia”, Sarah Dickens for her research on the art and visual culture of the Khmer Rouge regime, Randle Defalco for his research on Khmer Rouge famine and international law, Andrew Johnston for his research on lower level perpetrators in Khmer Rouge-era Cambodia and Nazi-era Germany and Poland, Chris Dearing on Anlong Veng and Burma/Cambodia project, and Professor James Tyner on a mapping project.

DC-Cam is working on a new publication (When Duch Laughs) of a photo book depicting Duch's rare old photographs from S-21, Duch's recent photographs, and the transcript of his recent interview with DC-Cam staff members, Savina Sirik and Kok-Thanh Eng, in 2012. Terith Chy, VPA team leader began to alter parts of his MA dissertation in order to contribute to the introduction of the book.

C. Translation

The translation of The Killing of Cambodia: Geography, Genocide and the Unmaking of Space from English to Khmer language was completed. It is 320 pages long. Please visit the link for the book’s abstract at: http://d.dccam.org/Publication/Translations/Translations.htm

VPA team made a considerable achievement in translating into English 41 victim information forms and 56 survivor stories.

5. Magazine, Radio, and Television

A. The Searching for the Truth

For more than a decade, Searching for the Truth has been a leading magazine aimed at disseminating DC-Cam’s work on document collection and sharing up-to-date information about the KR tribunal with the public, including those who have little education. This year DC-Cam produced and published 36,000 copies of 12 monthly Khmer issues and 2800 copies of one English issue. The Khmer and English copies of the magazine were distributed widely to all 1,537 commune offices, 33 government offices, 28 embassies, the National Assembly, the Senate, 3 political parties, 18 universities and libraries, the ECCC, researchers, villagers, and schools. Electronic copies of the magazine can be found at:

http://d.dccam.org/Projects/Magazines/Kh_magazine.htm
http://d.dccam.org/Projects/Magazines/English_version.htm

In February Issue (Issue 158), the magazine also covered stories on the cremation of former King Norodom Sihanouk. The cremation ceremony was taken place from February 1-7. In this publication, the team included people's views on the death of former king who was the most popular king in the heart of people. While the cremation ceremony was going on, a group of journalists who covered Cambodian war between 1970 and 1975 met and organized a ceremony to honor journalists who died in Cambodia during the Cambodian war. A memorial, initiated and funded by DC-Cam, was placed at the site where nine journalists were killed at Wat Po in Borset district, Kampong Speu province in May 1970. Issue 158 also contents outreach booklet on Ieng Thirith in order to distribute to the public.

In May issue (Issue 161) the magazine published letter from editor about the metropolitan museum in New York returned two statues that were illegally removed from Koh Ker to Cambodia. The statues were stolen from Prasat Chen temple in Koh Ker area during the civil war in Cambodia (1975-1979). Youk Chhang highlights the return of this cultural property as a great example and he encourages all museums abroad which held Khmer statues to return to Cambodia.

Family Tracing

- Survivors requests the Khmer Rouge to speed up its working process
- Pre-trial chamber judges again split down national/international lines in case 003
- Wealth of former Khmer Rouge leaders to pay for treatment of mental suffering?
- Nazi and Khmer Rouge are beyond comparison

Examples of family tracing requests:

Searching for My Husband

My name is Vong Phan, now living in Tuol Kraing village, Kraing Yov Commune, Sa-Ang district, Kandal Province. Before April 17th [1975], we lived in Beung Tumpun village, Phnom Penh. I separated from my husband, whose name was Ith Phanna alias Yort, when the Khmer Rouge soldiers entered Phnom Penh on April 17, 1975 at 9 in the morning. At that time, I had my daughter named Ith Chanry alias Asrey, who was 4 years old with me. At the time, I was also seven-month pregnant with my second child.

In 1979, I heard that my husband came to search for me at my home village in Phnom Penh and at that time my relatives told him that I and other children, as well as my parents, had died during the Khmer Rouge regime.

Nowadays, I and my children and my brothers—Phan and Phal—are living at Tuol Kraing village. If anyone knows my husband, please contact me at 012 992 171.

Searching for My Two Brothers

My name is Lim Keng, aged 43. I was born in Phnom Penh and now living at Ampov Diep village, Chroy Neang Nguon commune, Srey Snam district, Siem Reap province. My father name was Lim Chea Thai (deceased) and my mother’s name was Muy Chou (deceased). I have six siblings:
- Lim Sreng, brother, (disappeared)
- Lim Khim, brother, (disappeared)
- Lim Keng (me)
- Lim Pheng, brother, (he died of illness during the Khmer Rouge period)
- Lim Uy, brother, (he died of illness during the Khmer Rouge period)
- Lim Sakk, brother, (he died of illness during the Khmer Rouge period)

I am searching for my brothers: Lim Sreng and Lim Khim. In 1979, my brothers and I left Sraeng Bridge and intended to return to our homeland in Phnom Penh. When we arrived in Kralanh district, my two brothers asked an oxcart driver to help my board the oxcart as I could not walk because I was disabled since birth. Because there were lots of people walking, I separated from my brothers. Then, I asked an oxcart driver to drop my on the way, so that I could wait for my brother. However, I did not see my brother—until today. Later, I was adopted by a villager who brought me to live at Ampov Dieb village—where I have been living until today.

I would like to appeal to anybody who has known my brothers—Lim Sreng and Lim Khim—to contact me at 097 413 4145.

Below are highlights of other activities relevant to the magazine and comments from magazine readers:

- Aya Kimura contacted Socheat Nhean and asked for information relevant to former KR security guards and survivors to interview for a book which will be published in order to raise awareness about the KR issues among the Japanese. Japan is one of the main donor countries that provide funding to the KR tribunal.
- Socheat Nhean was interviewed by Laura Reed from Columbia University about Searching for the Truth magazine and the future Preah Vihear Times.
- Keo Koeun from Prey Veng Province called in to ask how he could send an article to publish in the magazine. He wrote an article about his experience during the KR regime to publish in Searching for the Truth.
- Socheat Nhean was interviewed by Peter Marinus Jensen of Denmark about the training on media and democracy that took place in Denmark in late 2010. Socheat told him about what he learned from the training and how he uses the training in his daily work at DC-Cam.
- During a visit to the Lao-Cambodia border province, Stung Treng, immigration policemen told a magazine team member that they love the magazine and wanted to read all copies.
- A woman named Tin from Preah Sihanouk Province called in and said that she loves reading Searching for the Truth and that her uncle and father also like reading it. Tin said that "Searching for the Truth is a wonderful magazine and all writers are great."
- Officials at the National Assembly told a magazine staff member that they love reading the "Documentation Section" of the magazine such as confessions of S-21 prisoners, revolutionary red flag, and others.
- Officials at Takeo Pedagogy School said that they want to have all copies of Searching for the Truth in their library so that their students can read it.
- Hao Phan, a curator from Northern Illinois University Library, requested to meet Socheat Nhean to discuss the possibility of bringing some magazines and other DC-Cam publications to display at his library.
- Reitz Karl-Heinz of Germany visited Socheat Nhean at DC-Cam. He needed a recommendation from Socheat Nhean on how to arrange for relatives of S-21 prisoner—Uch Samin—to visit the Tuol Sleng museum. Socheat Nhean contacted the commune chief in Prey Veng Province and was able to finally bring the relatives to visit Tuol Sleng for the first time.
• Stung Treng’s governor told DC-Cam that he received Searching for the Truth magazine every month and that he loves the magazine.

• Or Meoun, deputy village chief at Preah Vihear Province, said that he likes stories in Searching for the Truth magazine and he always wishes that he could meet the team from this magazine. On December 27 he met with Socheat Nhean, team leader of the magazine. At the time, Mr. Or Meoun said that he is happy because he could share his experience during the DK regime with magazine staff.

• Michelle Caswell of the University of Wisconsin requests for some photos from DC-Cam for her upcoming books which will be published by the University of Wisconsin Press.

• Former professor of anthropology at the Royal University of Fine Arts, Phong Tan, came to DC-Cam to ask for the confession of her uncle—Di Phonn and to read Searching for the Truth Magazine for her research.

• French journalist Robert Carmichael looked for two people who were possibly sent to S-21. They were Pen Trivan and his wife, Dr Ly Nay Sim, but they could not be found in DC-Cam list.

• Jens Meierhenrich requests for a photo of prisoners for upcoming publications at Oxford University Press.

• Paul Hovard of Australia requested for photos of KR soldiers at the airport with wrecked planes for his research.

• Chea Sopheavy, Office Assistant at Shanti Volunteer Association (SVA) organization requests for some photographs of King Funeral.

• English-written newspapers requested some photos of King's cremation ceremony in the 1960s for their newspaper.

• Chhay Bora, the director of a Cambodian drama Lost Love, requests some photos of Chan Kim Srun, S-21 victim.

• Chhay Chanda, the author of War and Genocide: A never-ending cycles of human brutality, requested to Socheat Nhean if DC-Cam could translate his monograph for Searching for the Truth Magazine. Author Chhay Chanda allowed Socheat Nhean to translate some life histories of people for the magazine.

• Lauren Bell of NIU asked for transcription of interviews that DC-Cam conducted. Socheat Nhean sent her some transcriptions.

• Jean Mathis, French journalists and film maker, interviewed Socheat Nhean for his documentary film about the preservation of skull and bones at Tuol Sleng and Cheung EK.

• Greg Procknow from Canada, sent article for Searching for the Truth and he offered assistance in editing the magazine and other DC-Cam work.

• Noy Sophary of ECCC's Defend Support Section requested for some magazine from DC-Cam.

• Do Mara, who worked for a tourism agency company called in and said that he loved Searching for the Truth magazine because it published fact about the KR and was very informative.
• Socheat Nhean sent photos of Cham Military General Les Kossem of the Lon Nol period for Phnom Penh Post. The photograph was published in the Post.
• Phann Sithan of Phnom Penh emailed Socheat and said he found the magazine useful to read.
• Northbridge International School requests that magazine be sent to them monthly as students like to research about the Khmer Rouge.
• Mondulkiri Museum Director asks DC-Cam to send magazine to his office monthly.
• Kroch Kimsan living in Phnom Penh received news about the death of his brother, Hay Sam Ol, through DC-Cam’ article published on Rasmei Kampuchea. Kimsan came to DC-Cam to meet with the Magazine team member. Kimsan was separated from Sam Ol for more than 30 years.
• Professor Tan Phong requested to DC-Cam to assist in establish contacts for people who were forced to marry during the Khmer Rouge period.
• Mr. Ponlork came to DC-Cam to look for full confession of his father who was killed at S-21. Ponlork learned from the Magazine Issue 60 that his father was killed during the KR regime.
• Professor Ashley Thompson of University of Leeds requested some photos of Tuol Sleng for her upcoming publication relating to Tuol Sleng function.

A Son of S-21 Prisoner learned about his Father from Searching for the Truth: In late June 2013, Mr. Ponlork, a resident of Phnom Penh, found the confession of his father named Poul Toeun in Issue 60 of Searching for the Truth Magazine. Upon learning this, Ponlork came to the DC-Cam to ask for more details about the destiny of his father. At DC-Cam, Ponlork met with Socheat Nhean. He was later given a full version of copy of his father's confession. Ponlork also learned that the interrogator of his father was Korn, which was presumably Prak Khorn. Socheat Nhean gave contact of Prak Korn to Ponlork. Ponlork said that he does not want to take revenge, but want to learn more about why his father was killed while he was a teacher before the Khmer Rouge period. Ponlork wholeheartedly thanked the team for the search.

B. Radio Broadcast "Voices of Genocide: Justice and the Khmer Rouge Famine"

DC-Cam’s new Radio Program on "Voices of Genocide Survivors: Famine in Democratic Kampuchea and Case 002 at the ECCC," explores the famine which occurred during the DK regime. The goals of this program are to provide survivors with legal and historical narratives of a major and often-overlooked source of suffering and mortality under the KR and to provide a common platform for survivors of the Cambodian genocide to share their individual experiences. Through these specific goals, the program aspires to contribute to the larger objective of reconciliation and justice in Cambodia. Main text for the broadcast was written by DC-Cam legal advisor Randle De Falco who wrote an unpublished monograph on famine under the Khmer Rouge. There are ten episodes in total to be aired for a 10-month period.

All episodes for the broadcast are to be recorded at VOA studio. The first episode was recorded and aired on March 3, which marked the first public broadcast of the program. Each episode was aired for one hour a day every week on Radio National of Kampuchea and the other three provincial radio stations including Battambang, Preah Vihear and Kampot.
Translated texts from the episodes were also published in local newspaper of Raksmey Kampuchea published (Please see Appendix B for the article). By September 2013, seven episodes were broadcast. Three more episodes were to be broadcast in October, November and December 2013. Copies of the Episode recording are available at: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Radio/Radio.htm.

The language used in the Episodes has been simplified to help local villagers understand. The records of the Episodes posted to DC-Cam's website to enable Cambodian people who live outside of the country to get access to the program. Voices of Genocide program generates dialogue among Cambodian Diasporas who left the country after the Khmer Rouge collapse. Since the first broadcast of the Voices of Genocide radio program particularly dedicated to the Khmer Rouge famine, the team received several emails from Cambodian Diasporas who have settled their new life in the third country after the fall of the Khmer Rouge regime. They have shared their views on the episodes' content. This means that they have followed our program closely through Internet. We believe that the broadcast of our episode has grabbed many people's attention and this generates dialogue among the Cambodian community no matter which country they live.

On June 25, 2013, Voices of Genocide received a letter from its faithful listener, Mr. Kim Leng, who is university student from Phnom Penh. Voices of Genocide have encouraged younger Cambodians to learn more about the Khmer Rouge history. In addition, the program has generated debates on different perspectives among its audience about the Khmer Rouge history.

The followings are response from listeners:

As one of the victims of KR regime, my father, younger sister, uncles and other relatives, I wish to see the root cause of the killing and the regime rather than hearing more about what the KR had done, it is too much. Justice for me is knowing why the KR regime was created and who is the mastermind of the regime to be found, broadcasted and published. Let's start to look at why and who rather than looking at how many they killed and what they have done.

Thank you so much again for updating me with this great news. I read the whole paragraph and understand a lot more than I ever expected, one thing that I do not understand during the KR regime from 1975-1979, Cambodia prefers herself as a "Democratic Kampuchea" country. The title of the country did not match the conflict, the crimes, the killings, the whole drama that KR did to her people and the country at all. "Democracy is the same as Justice" but unfortunately there was no justice and no democracy. Neither one of these two categories were represented during this brutal regime.

I see, there are two Radio stations in Cambodia to broadcast this KR activity, one in Kampot and Batambang. Please let people come to the station to share their terrible, horrible experiences; let them speak on the Radio so that the nation can hear the pain they have carried deep inside for so many years up to today and at the same time maybe help them release the anger and pain. Despite the fact that I was very young, did not understand what was going on in the country during the time of the war, I now understand more clearly, I feel the pain people are suffering today.

First of all I would like to introduce myself: my name is Denise Affonso and I am a Khmer rouge victim and survivor; 7 members of my family were killed or died of starvation during that hellish period, and today I continue to search for truth. I continue reading all the useful and interesting studies written by lots of academics, journalists and students, but I am not convinced that those brilliant writers, who did not experience the real situation, can today find out the truth or understand the real situation of the country at that time. With reference to your study focused on “Famine and Excess Mortality in Democratic Kampuchea,” I have several remarks concerning what you try to explain to the young generation today.

It is true that in the sixties until the seventies Cambodia was exporting its rice, but when King Norodom Sihanouk was overthrown, the country fell into civil war. When the Khmers Rouge seized power in 1975, all the population was thrown into the forest and rice-fields. They were obliged to do 2 to 3 harvests a year which normally is enough to feed everybody, but that was not the case because the Democratic Kampuchea exported the surplus of rice to China. Proof was found on the arrival of Vietnamese troops in January 1979; the warehouses in Phnom-Penh were full of rice bags ready to be sent to China, but no one will confirm this truth today. According to me, the starvation was voluntarily programmed by the Khmers Rouge in order to kill the city dwellers or new people with less costs and by having clean hands. Of course, when you are hungry you become weak and you eat whatever you find in the countryside which leads to stomach problems (as you describe in your study). Can you also explain to the young today why the new people did not receive any medications when they were sick?

Dear Community Radio of the Documentation Center of Cambodia, Having listened to four of your episodes on the Khmer Rouge famine, I feel shock and sorrow for the Cambodian people who died during the Khmer Rouge regime. From your program, I have learned that about 800,000 or even more people died particularly of starvation, lack of food or bad living conditions during the Khmer Rouge period. The most unbelievable thing is that some survivors have said that starvation led to the eating of human flesh. Some people had killed their own relatives or other members in the cooperative for their flesh. Moreover, I learned how the lack of sanitation also caused the death of many people and how stealing food was a reason for potential execution. I believe now that the causes of death of people during the Khmer Rouge regime were mostly due to lack of food and overwork.

All the stories above are the true history which Cambodian people faced during the Khmer Rouge regime. Therefore, as the younger generation, I believe we should read and learn more about this history in order to prevent this regime from happening again. At the same time, I would like to see the Khmer Rouge famine or starvation be discussed or charged in Case 002 by the Khmer Rouge Tribunal in order to give justice for the Cambodian people who had endured so much suffering during the Khmer Rouge Regime.

Questions from listeners sent to DC-Cam:

1. Why did the Khmer Rouge starve their people when they had produced a lot of crops? Where had those crops been transported to?
2. Why did the Khmer Rouge put their people to hard work?
3. Why did the Khmer Rouge kill their people?
4. Why did the Khmer Rouge separate people from their family members?
5. Why didn’t people rebel against the Khmer Rouge?
6. Has the Khmer Rouge Tribunal brought justice to the Khmer Rouge victims?

Find the answers to the questions above at:

As part of “Voices of Genocide: Justice and the Khmer Rouge Famine”, Men Pechet, a team leader, brought a group of seven university students to visit the site, where thousands of people were put into hardship and given insufficient food to eat. The study tour aimed at providing a better understanding among the younger generation and Khmer Rouge survivors in terms of DK history. The area of Sre Ambil was part of the Southwest Zone or Zone 405 under the absolute control of Chhit Choeun alias Ta Mok or “The Butcher”, who died in July 2006 after spending 7 years in the detention facility of the Cambodian Military Court, awaiting trial.

From September 27 to 29, Team Leader Men Pechet brought another group of 10 university students, from the Royal University of Phnom Penh, Royal University of Law and Economics, Build Bright University, University of Cambodia, Panhasastra University, and Institute of Foreign Languages, to visit Tramkak cooperatives and Kraing Ta Chan Prison in Takeo Province where many Cambodian people were put to hard labor and given insufficient food to eat. By visiting these places, the project seeks to promote better understanding, among both Cambodian youth and Khmer Rouge survivors, of an important part of their shared history. The trip is designed to facilitate dialogue concerning Khmer Rouge history.

A. Selected Research Assistance

DC-Cam provides assistance to academics, researchers, and students upon request. This year the center assisted researchers who conducted research on different topics relating to the KR regime and its impact on Cambodian society today. Research focused on many topics. Some of them were:

- The conception of former KR cadres' understanding of justice in the Cambodian post-genocide reconciliation process. The main themes included victim and perpetrator identities, expectations and needs of reconciliation, and the notion of justice and reconciliation.

- Cham Muslims and their relationship with, and/or influence they receive from, Muslims outside Cambodia including Arab Muslims and minority Muslims who use English. The researcher is also interested in the history of how Cham Muslims have understood or interpreted the Quran.

- The history of both Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum and Cheung Ek killing fields, their management, and visitation during the 1980s.

- Cultural memorials and the politics of cultural memorials in Cambodia, especially institutions such as Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum, Cheung Ek and other killing fields in the rest of Cambodia. Using ethnography field work, qualitative and historical research, the researcher attempted to answer key questions relating to how the Cambodian genocide is remembered and interpreted.

- Evidence of dehumanization under DK which caused, assisted, and perpetuated killings by the KR. The researcher also sought to find out whether there is evidence of dehumanization in school in the pre-KR time.

- Didactical thinking behind conveying sensitive topics in history using Cambodia as a case-study. By using DC-Cam’s Genocide Education Project as an example, the author seeks to answer research questions. Didactics in history means that it is not only history in itself which is important; it is also how it is planned, organized, and finally implemented.

- The purges within the KR between 1975 and 1979. How it was planned, organized, conveyed, and implemented.

- Public memory after genocide in comparative perspective drawing attention from genocide memorials in many parts of Cambodia, studying individual and public narratives of the past through the resources at DC-Cam. The research also looks at how both narrative efforts affect public memory of the past.

The research team assisted the following international researchers in their respective international research:
Friderike Erust, a researcher from Youth for Peace, asked for assistance from DCCam to conduct research for her masters thesis on the topic, “Understanding of Justice of Former KR and Expectation of Reconciliation.”

Andriana Escobar, a Colombian researcher and a masters degree student in history at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales, in Paris, France, is conducting research focusing on memory construction and curatorial practices in Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum. The purpose of this research is to learn about memory initiatives in Cambodia and make it known to Colombia, where almost no memory work has been done after forty years of war. During her research in Cambodia, she sought DCCam’s assistance in contacting the Genocide Museum, locating archival pictures about S-21 and the museum, historical and official documents about the role of the government in establishing the museum, information that shows the political and cultural contexts of memorial construction post-1979, and interviewing DC-Cam staff members about the collaborative work of DC-Cam and the museum.

Michael Falser, an associate research fellow for German Center for History of Art in Paris, requested a high resolution of the Khmer Rouge administrative map for his upcoming book entitled Archaeologizing Heritage. Michael Falser conducted his research in Cambodia four years ago and was assisted by DC-Cam in his understanding of the Khmer Rouge’s treatment of Cambodia’s cultural heritage. His book is being published by Springer.

Liv Weisberg who is a project leader of Living History Forums in Stockholm requested photos from DC-Cam about children working, child soldiers, children’s homes, children being taken from their parents and children being taught under trees. Liv Weisberg also looked for photos of children in propaganda documents of DK. Liv Weisberg was conducting research to make a documentary film on crimes committed by communist regimes in the world. One particular case in the film was Cambodia and the Khmer Rouge’s treatment of children.

Haruna Ohldin is a second year student pursuing a bachelor in jurisprudence at Lulea University of Technology, Sweden’s northern most university. As a part of Haruna’s Bachelor’s degree, Haruna was to make a field study regarding the Swedish-Cambodian development programme, with special focus on rural women’s human rights. Haruna wanted to investigate the results of the bilateral development program in the Cambodian society from a perspective of law and human rights with special focus on women. As a support for this project, Haruna was awarded the Minor Field Study (MFS) scholarship. The visit will take place in the middle of autumn of this year and last for a minimum of 8 weeks. DC-Cam gave some advice concerning Haruna’s research and will assist her once arriving in Cambodia.

Dr Renee Jeffery is an Associate Professor of International Relations at the Australian National University working on aspects of post-conflict justice. She was interested, in particular, in moral reparations and have conducted research in Cambodia on this in the past. In December 2011 she interviewed Youk Chhang about moral reparations at the ECCC and in Cambodia more generally. She was planning to conduct a large-scale project on moral reparations in Cambodia and at the International Criminal Court and the Inter-American Court of Human Rights. As part of the research she would spend time as a visiting scholar at other institutions. DC-Cam would assist her in this research in Cambodia.

Katie Combs worked on a short film as part of the Stockton Cambodian Oral History Project in Stockton, Calif., USA. The film follows a handful of subjects as they talk about their family history during the Khmer Rouge period and then discuss how they kept art forms (music, song, etc.) alive, culminating with footage from Stockton's large New Year celebration in April. She requested archive footage from the Khmer Rouge period in order to better illustrate the suffering that our subjects speak of. It would be used as b-roll in the film (which will be screened locally).

Melinda Macdonald is currently completing her dissertation research on the healing of trauma and peacebuilding for reconciliation with a cultural lens. DC-Cam provided her advice on appropriate victims to meet and offered her interviews on the subject.

DC-Cam hosted Dr. Reiko Okawa, an associate professor from Meiji Gakuin University, Japan, who is conducting her research on Islam in Cambodia. In this process DC-Cam assisted her in identifying interviewees, making field trips and locating relevant documents. She is writing her paper on “Cham Hidden Documents in Cambodia: Islam in the Pol Pot Period.”

Jerôme de Liège, a master's student in politics and society at Maastricht University, the Netherlands, conducted field work and interviews for his research on cultural memorial centers such as Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum and Choeung Ek killing fields. He also conducted interview with DC-Cam staff and sought assistance from DC-Cam in locating key informants. The case study was about the political implication of the memorials and experiences of visitors. The research intended to provide better understandings of the political contexts and motivations of Cambodians to visit the memorials.

Dania Rodrigues is currently doing her master in Anthropology at the University of Torino, Italy. Since she was a child, she has always been quite fascinated by Cambodian ancient history; but learning about Cambodian recent history left her so intrigued that she decided to make her Master's thesis about the genocide perpetrated by the Khmer Rouge in this country during 1975-79. Dania will be focusing particularly on the topic of ideology, studied from an anthropological point of view: why did this society give birth to an ideology that, when put into practice, annihilated almost 1/4 of its population? What were the means this ideology used to gather its followers, and then to create the utopia it envisioned? And what effects did it cause to the generations who were indoctrinated according to these principles? She was in Phnom Penh in June gathering some material for her research. She came to DC-Cam to request documents and advice on conducting her research.

Theresa de Langis is an independent researcher in Phnom Penh. She requested access to research archives held at DC-Cam specifically related to sexual violence and “immoral offenses” during the Khmer Rouge Period. She worked on an oral history project on the same subject in Cambodia, and would be very interested to share with DC-Cam the results of this work and to discuss the possibility of depositing the original archives from this project in the DC-Cam files.
Lindsay Gasik came to Cambodia in June to conduct her research on Durian fruits and how it was used during the Khmer Rouge period. She went to Kep and visited the Phnom Voar pepper and durian plantations. She was interested to learn that this mountain was a stronghold of the Khmer Rouge until 1997. With advice from DC-Cam, she spoke to a few of the durian farmers and asked about whether or not the Khmer Rouge cut down durian trees. They told her that in Kampot many durian trees were cut down, but they were preserved in Kep to serve to officers on holiday. During her research she realized that the situation under the Khmer Rouge varied from region to region. She requested from DC-Cam more information under the Khmer Rouge regime in provinces such as Kep, Kampot, Kampong Cham, and Phnom/Battambang.

Prach Ly is a film maker from California. He is a Cambodian American. He and his associate Caylee So worked on putting together the first ever Cambodian film festival in Long Beach California, which has the largest Cambodians outside of South East Asia. Their festival is to take place in the heart of Cambodia Town, so it is only right that they name it 'Cambodia Town Film Festival' (www.cambodiatownfilmfestival.com). It will be the largest Cambodian film festival in the United States and Kalyanee Mam, DC-Cam’s filmmaker, is one of our Committee member and not just that, A River Changes Course will premiere there. It’s in September 14th-15th. Prach Ly requested for film footages from DC-Cam for his preparation for the film festival.

Caroline Bennett studies Cambodian mass graves for her research at School of Anthropology and Conservation, University of Kent. She was looking for information about Chamcar Bei, (Phnom Voar) in Kampot province. She used your database to search for it, but cannot find any information. She was examining the resettlement of perpetrators after political violence, and as Chamcar bei is a resettlement area.

Erna Anjarwati. In the preparation of her departure to Cambodia this coming October for conducting primary data collection with theatre groups, she is also planning to conduct archive research with DC-Cam in order to collect further information regarding the historical context of genocide and the role of theatre before and after the genocide. This archival research is conducted to complete the primary data collection she is going to carry out with the Amrita Performing Arts, the Cambodian Living Arts and the PPS Theatre group. In achieving this plan, she asked if there was any possibility for her to cooperate with DC-Cam to collect archive data regarding the historical context of Cambodian genocide and the role of theatre before and after genocide. DC-Cam agreed with her request.

Kevin Janssen is a Dutch writer, about to go on a trip to Anlong Veng. He was interested in the history of the town and its people over the last four decades and its current state. He was wondering if DC-Cam could help with the following:

- What is a good place to find information about Anlong Veng? For instance a website, book or a person to speak to.

- A guide in Anlong Veng? Someone who can show him all there is to see there and who speaks proper English so he or she can translate Khmer for him in order to communicate with the locals.
DC-Cam provided advice to Kevin Janssen before his trip to Anlong Veng.

John E Langeland was from Sweden. He came to DC-Cam to request assistance on conducting research on genocide education in Cambodia.

Jane Arnfield completed work with DC-Cam on the Museum of Memory project under the direction of Mr. Youk Chhang.

Elana Haviv, a fellow from Columbia University's Oral History Project, sought for assistance from DC-Cam to develop Human Right Box for high school teachers that focuses on genocide and global citizenry. In addition to stories from other countries, the project will be using personal narratives of both victims and former KR cadres to include in the lesson plans. Most of the resources used for this project would come from oral history interviews of KR survivors and former KR cadres by DC-Cam.

Jenny Mith conducted research on learning more about the Cambodian-American refugee experience. She used philosopher Michel Foucault's framework of biopolitics to find parallels between life for a Cambodian refugee living in the United States and life for a victim living through the Cambodian Genocide. Ultimately, she hoped to support the claim that certain social, cultural, and political practices and policies in the U.S. were responsible for perpetuating the traumatic experience of the refugee. She visited DC-Cam as well as the Tuol Sleng Genocide museum to obtain records about the way that victims of the genocide were treated by the Khmer Rouge.

Simona Pinton is a student of Professor Ron Sly at the Seattle University School of Law. She is an international lawyer and a researcher in international criminal law and human rights law. In the last seven years she taught these subjects at the Universities of Venice and Padua in Italy. Recently she taught a course on International Criminal Law at Wake Forest Law School as a visiting professor.

She holds a Ph.D. in International Law from the University of Padua and an LLM in International Law from UC Berkeley. She served on the prosecutorial team for the UN Tribunal for the Genocide in Rwanda, in Arusha, working on the Butare and Seromba cases. In the last year she has been a visiting scholar at the University of Washington School of Law and she is currently continuing to work on a book on the role of restorative justice in international law.

She requested to conduct research at DC-Cam and would like to apply for a summer internship or other programs. She was interested in knowing more about the Truth, History and Education Committee and the transitional justice model, in the form of an educational program, to be used in post-conflict societies.

Malin Sofie Alvestad Hjelle is a Norwegian student planning to come to Cambodia and DC-Cam in September to do research for her master’s degree on the Cambodian educational system and how it has handled the genocide. Kjetil Grødum of Stiftelsen Arkivet recommended her to DC-Cam so that she could study materials relating to the Khmer Rouge tribunal. She was also interested in the Genocide Education project.
Patrick Pfeiffer was enrolled as a student in the Master’s Program for Social Anthropology at Martin-Luther-University Halle-Wittenberg, Germany. The program required a field research on a particular disciplinary question. He planned to come in August/September 2013. The main goal of the research was to identify and analyze Cambodian commemorative culture related to the genocide. He was interested in a comparison between Cambodia and Germany of how the past was remembered in the present. He planned to visit several museums (especially the Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum) and examine the depiction of violence and the treatment with human remains. He was also interested in genocide education project.

Professor JoAnn DiGeorgio-Lutz, Ph.D., Department Head and Graduate Advisor of Department of Political Science at Texas A&M University-Commerce, plans to come to DC-Cam in October to conduct her research on certain topics relating to the Khmer Rouge regime, particularly women under Democratic Kampuchea.

Nicole Jenne is a doctoral researcher from the European University Institute in Florence, Italy. She is also a visiting scholar of S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies (RSIS), Graduate School of Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. She was conducting her research on the Thai-Cambodian border conflict. Her dissertation concerns the management of territorial conflict within the context of regional security, being the Thai-Cambodian case one of my case studies.

Tan Sock Keng, a student from National University of Singapore, is planning to conduct her research on the Renakse Petitions to be done in 2014. Mainly, she will seek to reconstruct the project to collect petitions and signatures from people all over Cambodia, covering its initiation, implementation and outcome. She requested for assistance in her research while helping DC-Cam in their museum project.

DC-Cam assisted PhD student, Andrew Johnston in conducting field research in Kampot province and Anlong Veng district as well as looking at original documents at the office. DC-Cam also helped him in translation of main documents and interpretation of interviews.

DC-Cam helped to allocate some documents to support research on culture and the arts during the Khmer Rouge regime, conducted by Malte von der Brelie from University of Göttingen, Germany.

DC-Cam assisted Professor James Tyner from Kent State University for his research on the KR health care system. The assistance DC-Cam provides to Professor Tyner includes document allocation, document translation, interview summary, and field trip research.

B. Participation in Conferences (By Invitation)

From October 16-17, Socheat Nhean participated in a meeting with journalists from Singapore, Vietnam, and Burma in Phnom Penh. The meeting was intended for invited journalists to learn leadership skills and share experiences with editors-in-chief in their newsroom.
Terith Chy and Savina Sirik participated in a meeting between the VSS, LCL Section, international organizations and NGOs, and government agencies on October 5 at the ECCC to update activities related to reparations and non-judicial measures, project design, and fundraising strategy.

Samphors Huy was on a panel to represent DC-Cam at a film screening and discussion event, "Cambodia: A Quest for Justice," which was held at Rutgers University, Newark, on October 11. The seminar was organized by the United Nations Department of Public Information in partnership with Rutgers University Center for the Study of Genocide, Conflict Resolution and Human Rights, and DC-Cam

On October 20, 2012, Sreinith Ten and Suyheang Kry were invited to speak at a conference hosted by the Cambodian Student Association of California State University, Fullerton, aimed at promoting and enhancing the understanding of Cambodian American students about the Khmer culture and heritage. The theme "Lotus Legacy: Revive and Flourish" of the conference strongly stresses the importance of understanding the Cambodian history and culture and most importantly the challenges and difficulties of the young Cambodian Americans in identifying themselves apart from their parents who were born and raised in Cambodia before they immigrated to the United States. Sreinith Ten presented DC-Cam's Searching for the Truth magazine, and discussed the importance of memory and truth of the KR history with the participants. Suyheang Kry brought participants' attention to understanding the justice-seeking process in Cambodia through her VPA project.

On November 20, DC-Cam director Youk Chhang participated in a roundtable discussion on human rights organized by the U.S. Embassy for senior advisors to the U.S. President and Chair of the White House Council on Women and Girls, Ms. Valerie Jarrett, and Special Assistant to the President, Ms. Samantha Power. Mr. Ambassador William Todd wrote a letter of thanks to the director for his contribution to the discussion (see the Appendix D for the letter).

On December 4 DC-Cam's Deputy Director Dara Vanthan and legal advisor Christopher Dearing attended a conference, "Expert Conference: Contribution of Criminal Proceedings Before the ECCC to Cambodian Law" at Royal University of Rule and Economics.

Director Youk Chhang was invited to speak at Cambodian Living Arts' "Visions 2020" Roundtable discussions, which took place at Plantation Hotel, Phnom Penh. The discussion was intended to address challenges faced by artists.

From December 12-14 Phalla Chea attended the 10th ASEAN Inter-University Seminar on Social Development in Brunei, and presented her paper Perspective of Thailand as a Host Country on the Free Movement of Workers.

Terith Chy, Savina Sirik, Khamboloy Dy, Kok-Thay Eng, P.Dara Vanthan, and Sok-Kheang Ly participated in the Fourth Regional Forum on the Prevention of Genocide, co-organized by the Governments of Argentina, Cambodia, Switzerland, and Tanzania. The forum took place at Intercontinental Hotel, from February 28-March 1, 2013.
On March 1, DC-Cam director Youk Chhang presented on the topic of "Role of Civil Society on the Prevention of Genocide," at the Fourth Regional Forum on the Prevention of Genocide.

Kok-Thay Eng gave a presentation at the Fifth Annual Khmer Studies Forum on the theme "Identity" which was held at the Center for Southeast Asian Studies at Ohio University from March 15-17, 2013. Please see the link to the forum report and his video presentation here: http://www.seas.ohio.edu/ksf2013.html#.

On March 21, Farina So participated in The Preah Vihear Conference, "Preah Vihear and Pra Viharn Conference: Pathways to a Shared Destiny," organized by Institute of Security and International Studies, Chulalongkorn University. The conference was intended to prepare people and other stakeholders for the second interpretation of the ICJ's verdict on Preah Vihear temple (See Appendix C for the summary report of the conference).

On March 22, Terith Chy and Christoper Dearing attended an update meeting with UN Special Envoy to the KRT on challenges currently the ECCC is facing, namely the budget crisis and the status of Case 003 and 004.

On March 28, Savina Sirik and Sok-Kheang Ly participated in one-day Strategic Planning Workshop organized by Civil Peace Service of Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) GmbH at Lotus Blanc restaurant. The workshop was intended for GIZ's partner NGOs and other relevant organizations working in the field of peacebuilding to address needs of peacebuilding, and provide recommendations for GIZ to plan their future peace programs.

From April 9 to 19, Genocide Education Project Leader, Dy Khamboly, travelled to the U.S. to give a speech on the "Challenges of Genocide Education in Cambodia" at the symposium, Policy and Practice: Pedagogy about the Holocaust and Genocide, which was held at the Strassler Center of Holocaust and Genocide Studies at Clark University, Massachusetts, US.

VPA Project team leader Terith Chy was invited to join a panel of experts on victims' participation in the Hague from April 24 to 27. The expert meetings were jointly organized by Amnesty International and Redress. The purpose of the meetings was to offer suggestions and recommendations to the International Criminal Court (ICC) which is struggling to deal with accommodating of large number of victims. Terith Chy observed that the ICC has faced similar challenges that the ECCC in Cambodia has, dealing with victims in criminal trials. This has made experience from Cambodia very important for the purpose of discussion. One of the suggestions made by Terith Chy was to properly manage the application form, instead of making it freely available, and to carefully select and work with intermediaries. In his view, with proper established relationship and trainings to intermediary organizations, time and resource could be significantly saved for the reason that incomplete applications can be largely avoided.

DC-Cam's Director Youk Chhang participated as a guest speaker in a Conference organized by Asia-Pacific College of Diplomacy of Australian National University (ANU) and the University of New South Wales to mark the 20th Anniversary of the 1993 Cambodian election. The conference, taken place on May 23-24, was supported the Australian Civil Military Centre, and was designed not simply to look back at the UNTAC experience, but rather to see how that experience shaped subsequent developments in Cambodia and beyond, and what implications for the future of complex peace operations might be. Mr. Youk Chhang spoke for about 30 minutes on the topic of ‘Cambodia after UNTAC’. (Please see Appendix for Mr. Chhang’s speech). Links to the event can be found at:

From June 7-12, CTM project team leader Phalla Chea travelled to Singapore to present her paper “Intra-Asean Migration and Human Security: A Case of Cambodia and Thailand” at Korean-ASEAN Migration and Human Security at Singapore Management University.

From June 10-11, DC-Cam's Director gave a speech on the topic "From Killing Fields to Economy in Transition: How Social Entrepreneurship is bringing Cambodia out of the Past and into the Future," at Sunway University, co-organized by the University and AirAsia Foundation. Link to information on the event and to featured story of the director:

On June 16-17, Savina Sirik, Pechet Men, and Socheat Nhean attended 37th Session of the World Heritage Committee Meeting organized by UNESCO and the National Commission of Cambodia with support from the Office of Council of Ministers. The whole event, lasted for twelve days from June 16 to 27, was held at the Peace Palace of Phnom Penh and Siem Reap and attended by 1300 participants from 120 state parties.

On June 25, Terith Chy and three legal associates attended a public forum organized by the Cambodian Center for Human Rights (CCHR). The forum was on freedom of expression in Cambodia. It was interesting when representatives of all political parties were invited to present their opinions on their parties’ policies in relation to freedom of expression in the forum. Representatives from the ruling party, the Cambodian People’s Party was not present. The rest of the representatives were, instead of discussing their policies in relation to the freedom of expression, simply propagandizing their political parties, with the exception of a few who clearly touched on freedom of expression. The general views of the forum were critical of the current practice of freedom of expression in Cambodia.

On June 28, Phalla Chea presented CTM’s and Trial Observation’s work at the ECCC Legacy Update Meeting organized by Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, at Sunway Hotel, Phnom Penh.

On June 29-30, Director Youk Chhang participated in 8th regional workshop of the Asian Region of the Site of Conscience organized by Liberation War Museum, Dhaka, Bangladesh in collaboration with International Coalition of Sites of Conscience, New York. He presented the topic "Memorialization, Museum and Justice" as part of the plenary/public session at the National Museum.

On July 23, in collaboration with the Network for Human Rights Documentation-Burma (ND-Burma), DC-Cam met human rights activists, archivists, peacemakers from five institutions, such as Kachin Women’s Association, Pa-Oh Youth Organization, Lahu Women’s Organization Ta'ang Student and Youth Organization/ND-Burma Office and Palaung Women's Organization/ND-Burma, on documenting human rights abuse in Yangon, Burma, for the purpose of providing assistance possible in the establishment of a Documentation Center/Truth Commission in Myanmar. The meeting was convened again on July 26 for the discussion of the final agreement.

In the meeting, key challenges faced by the ND-Burma were indicated, including the government’s opposition to ND-Burma’s strategic objectives, ethnic divisions undermining coherence between local and national-level objectives, public understanding and appreciation of the meaning and utility of key strategic terms (i.e., “documentation”) remaining low, and the lack of technical expertise in setting up, sourcing, and managing a documentation center.

In response to these issues, DC-Cam proposed the following approaches:
1. Assume a more nuanced approach to political stakeholders in order to leverage greater flexibility and freedom in strategic activities;
2. Develop a more nuanced communications strategy that addresses multiple angles and audiences;
3. Consider the expansion of public education activities in order to address public misunderstanding and misapprehension of strategic concepts and activities; and
4. Focus on core competencies as key short-term goal in order to improve long-term sustainability, credibility, and program quality. See DC-Cam’s statement in Appendix.

On August 21-24, Director Youk Chhang participated in the Common Lives Film Festival which is a side event of the 3rd International Conference on International Research and Development (ICIRD 2013) in Thailand. The festival is part of Thammasat Human Rights Film Festival featuring films and documentaries on human rights in Southeast Asia. As a producer of “A River Changes Course.” Mr. Chhang provided the screening of the film upon invitation, and this was followed by Q&A session.

On August 25th, Director Youk Chhang attended a seminar at Jim Thomson Art Center in Bangkok, Thailand, as a speaker. The seminar was organized by the Initiative of Museum and Library for Peace. Mr. Chhang discussed a topic of “Memory and Justice: Killing Field, Managing Memory and Cambodia Today”. The organizer wrote “[t]he experience of Cambodia is, therefore, significant to Thai society and its quest for education for peace which is a foundation for peace within and beyond.”

C. National and International Cooperation

On October 10 the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports and DC-Cam signed a memorandum of understanding (MoU) at the Ministry of Education to transfer a parcel of land (4,785.61 square meters) to DC-Cam to build its permanent center, the Sleuk Rith Institute. The institute aims to be the leading center for genocide studies in Asia comprised of three major pillars: museum, research center, and school. Photographs of the event are available at: http://d.dccam.org/Projects/Genocide/photos/Agreement_of_MoEY_and_Sports_and_DCC_AM/index.html

In October DC-Cam met with H.E. Ros Ren, a secretary of state of the Ministry of Tourism, to discuss the possibilities of establishing a partnership with the ministry on building a peace center in Anlong Veng area.
On October 18-20 DC-Cam and the International NGO Forum based in South Korea cohosted "East Asia Conference of NGOs on History and Peace" at Cambodiana Hotel, Phnom Penh. The conference was intended to explore agendas related to peace and history and to seek a common perception of history with civil organizations from home and abroad which have been carrying out activities in various fields for the construction of peace in East Asia through reconciliation of history. The NGO forum was directed toward the goal of sharing common agendas and global issues together with overseas member organizations. The conference, presided over by H.E. Tun Sa-im, undersecretary of state of Ministry of Education, Youth, and Sports, was attended by 140 participants from twenty countries in Asia, America and Africa. Photos of the event are available at: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Living_Doc/Photos/2012/2012_East_Asian_Conference_of_NGOs_on_History_and_Peace/index.html

From October 22-28, a delegation of United States Holocaust Memorials Museum travelled to Cambodia on a trip entitled "Journey to Cambodia: A Bearing Witness Trip to Phnom Penh and the Khmer Rouge War Crimes Tribunal," with an aim to create an exhibition on genocide in Cambodia in the context of globalization at the Holocaust Museum in Washington DC, U.S. The exhibition will feature photographs, video footage, and artifacts from the KR regime as well as discuss the ongoing process of the KR tribunal. With assistance from DC-Cam, the delegation visited Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum, Cheung Ek killing fields, KR mass graves, crime sites of the KR, met with former S-21 guard Him Huy and child survivor Norng Chan Phal, and a victim of sexual violence during the DK period. The visit was featured in a news article of Asia Times online on Nov 9, 2012. The link is available at: http://www.atimes.com/atimes/Southeast_Asia/NK09Ae01.html

On November 12, 2012, Director Youk Chhang met with Mr. Han Gyi from Burma. Han is working in an organization based in Chiang Mai, Thailand. The meeting was to discuss the possibility of establishing a documentation center in Burma based on Cambodia’s experience. Director Youk Chhang provided some suggestions to Mr. Han Gyi including proper methodologies to be used to collect documents from the ground, principles for the organization (such as the organization should not be a judicial institute), and sensitive words that should be selectively used in the reports or publications. The director also welcomed Han’s colleagues if they would like to do internships at DC-Cam so as to learn about DC-Cam’s work and build connections with other NGOs.

To celebrate 10th Anniversary of the Living History Forum of Sweden and cooperation and relationship with DC-Cam, Director Youk Chhang wrote a short greeting to the Living History Forum: “On this 10th anniversary of The Living History Forum, DC-Cam commends the organization for its work but it also wants to remind the world community of the solemn role of the individual in preventing violence. The individual can be the agent for stasis as much as change and it is imperative that every individual on the planet realizes his/her own responsibility in the global struggle to end mass violence.”

On a collaborative exhibition project with the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, DC-Cam worked with the museum’s representatives to identify the best ideas, illustration, and sources to convey complex topics of genocide and mass atrocities in Cambodia to visitors. The representatives conducted their research trip to Cambodia from May 27 to June 7, to discuss with DC-Cam on suggested potential materials for display and cultural activities. The
The purpose of the trip is to collect ideas and information for the upcoming on-line and museum displays—divided into two parts -- one on the genocide and mass atrocities from 1975-1979 and the other featuring Cambodia and the ECCC in the context of the international pursuit of justice for genocide and crimes against humanity in the post-Holocaust era.

DC-Cam assisted Han Gyi, Network for Human Rights Documentation (ND)-Burma program coordinator, with preparation to bring DC-Cam’s team to Burma to share experiences on documentation of the KR regime with the organization. From July 23 to August 1, Director Youk Chhang, Farina So, and Pechet Men travelled to Rangoon. The Exchange Program between DC Cam and ND-Burma aims to share Cambodian memories and the justice seeking process, especially linkage between DC-Cam and the Khmer Rouge Tribunal and to study the institutional transformation under the transitional period. Both organizations have agreed on a joint internship program which will bring two interns from ND-Burma program and outside of organization to do an internship with DC-Cam for one month.

As a result of DC-Cam’s mission to Burma, DC-Cam accepted two Burmese activists from ND-Burma and the 88 Generation to work, learn and share experience at DC-Cam. The two are:

1. Ms. Nang Htoi Rawng, born in 1986 in Kutkai, Myanmar, has been working with Kachin Women’s Association Thailand (KWAT) since 2008, where she works as a coordinator of the Income Generation Program, managing the project’s finance and communication with stakeholders. Since May 2011, Ms. Nang has served as coordinator of the Documentation and Research Program. Ms. Nang’s main responsibilities are proposal and report writing, project and financial management, and fieldwork data verification. In 2012, Ms. Nang was elected to represent KWAT in the ND-Burma Network and served as a member on the Management Board for a one-year term (2012 July – June 2013).

2. Mr. Chit Min Lay was born in 1974 in Yangon, Myanmar. In 1991, he enrolled in the University of Yangon. In 1996 and 1998, Mr. Chit participated in the student pro-democracy uprising as a university student. In 1998, the year of his graduation, Mr. Chit was arrested and sentenced to 31 years in prison for his role in the democracy and human rights movement. After spending 14 years behind bars, he was released on January 12, 2012. After his release, Mr. Chit has participated in capacity building programs held by the British Council in Yangon and other non-governmental organizations. Currently, Mr. Chit serves in The 88 Generation Peace and Open Society Organization as the deputy in charge of the Education Sector, encouraging citizen participation in Myanmar’s transition to democracy by promoting human rights, civil rights, multi-cultural understanding and tolerance.

During the course of their internship, Mr. Dearing provided 18 hours of English Language Human Rights Education to the two (2) Myanmar/Burmese delegates from ND-Burma above. While the education program’s main objective was to improve their English language proficiency, the education program also covered the following lessons:

a) Corporate social responsibility in Myanmar/Burma (based on New York Times® article);
b) Review of Universal Declaration of Human Rights;
c) Analysis and Comparison of Genocide Convention; Hague Convention; and Geneva Conventions;
d) Review of ICCPR, CEDAW;
e) Introduction to the ECCC (and international criminal law in general).

Dr. Maung Zarni, Associate Fellow, UMCEDEL, Visiting Senior Research Fellow, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences of University of Malaya was invited by DC-Cam to lecture, from 4-8 September, on the human rights situation in Burma, in order to enhance DC-Cam’s short training program for the first batch of Burmese human rights researchers.

DC-Cam received a group of 8 students and 2 faculty members from the University Center for Excellence in Developmental Disabilities and University of Washington. Dr. Kok-Thay Eng talked to these students about Cambodia’s recent history, particularly the Khmer Rouge history, as well as the work of DC-Cam.

7. Staff Development

A. Advanced Degree Training

Staff development at DC-Cam is a key towards succeeding in its main objectives of memory and justice. Given its importance, advanced degree opportunity is provided with no discrimination of gender, race and religion. This reflects the policy of the Center which states that “male and female staff should be given equal encouragement and opportunity to study abroad”.

This year five DC-Cam staff completed their studies overseas and returned to use their knowledge to develop and improve upon current works of DC-Cam:

Samphors Huy graduated with an MA in global studies from Rutgers University in late Spring 2013. She is now pursuing a PhD on the same course at Rutgers University.

Kunthy Seng completed her MA in Thai studies from Chulalongkorn University in May 2013.

Kok-Thay Eng received his PhD degree in global affairs at Rutgers University in May 2013.

Sokchamroeun Ly finished her MA in peace and conflict studies from the University of Massachusetts Lowell (UMASS Lowell) in December 2012. Ms. Ly conducted a small project for her master's thesis on “The Role of the Angkor Dance Troupe in Healing, Reconciliation, and Peace for Cambodian Americans after Genocide.”

Sokvisal Kimsroy completed his LLM in human rights at Hong Kong University, Hong Kong, in Spring 2013.

Four staff members will complete their study at certain overseas universities by 2014:

Rasy Pheng Pong will graduate with an MA in educational management and leadership from University De La Salle, the Philippines in early 2014.
Suyheang Kry is writing his Master’s thesis for her degree in peace and conflict studies at University of Massachusetts Lowell (UMASS Lowell). She is expected to completed her study in Spring 2014.

Sreinith Ten is earning her MA in political science at University of Northern Illinois, United States. She is expected to complete her program in Fall 2014.

Ratanak Leng is earning his MA in New Politics and Future Governance at Kyung Hee University, Republic of Korea. He is expected to complete his study in Spring 2014.

Three staff members will complete their studies after 2014:

Sophorn Huy is pursuing her MBA at University De La Salle, the Philippines. She is expected to complete her study in Fall 2015.

Farina So began her PhD degree in Global Studies at University of Massachusetts Lowell (UMASS Lowell) in September 2013.

Savina Sirik started her MA degree program in Geography at Kent State University, USA, which will began in August 2013.

B. Training

Sothida Sin and Sovanndany Kim participated in a teaching internship at Lowell High School, U.S., where they learned about American methods of social studies education and genocide education. Their tasks were to observe teachings in classrooms, participate in staff meetings and professional development, and act as guest speakers in the schools and community. The internship was held in between April 25 and May 31 2013.

Bunthorn Som and Sarakmonin Teav participated in Dart Center for Journalism and Trauma, a project of Columbia University, held in Bangkok, Thailand from May 12-19, 2013. In this fellowship, they learned how to cover stories on tragic events, violence, conflict and emotional trauma with other journalists and editors from the Asia Pacific Region.

Fatily Sa and Penhsamnang Kan screened DC-Cam's documentary A River Changes Course at the 5th International NGO Conference on History and Peace at Kyung Hee University from July 21 to 25, 2013.

Ms. Savina Sirik and Phalla Chea obtained certificates for the completion of Democracy Development from Shally Prasad, Director of the Office of Democracy and Governance, USAID Cambodia. Savina and Phalla completed the Major Open Online Course presented by Stanford University and Coursera Inc.

This article is available at: http://www.bangkokpost.com/lifestyle/family/360060/recording-unheard-voices

On July 16th The Guardian web-media posted an article entitled “Cambodian Reality TV Show Reunites Families Torn Apart by the Khmer Rouge” and quoted Mr. Youk Chhang’s view on healing the wounds of the Killing Fields. Mr. Chhang said “[i]t’s a very Cambodian way of trying to bring some closure . . . you put the story on stage and there is a bit of drama and a happy ending.” He went on by saying “I think reconciliation is very personal. For me I couldn’t. I have no more tears to cry. So I couldn’t go on stage to cry.” The article is available at: http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2013/jul/16/cambodia-reality-tv-reunites-families-khmer-rouge

On July 22nd The Telegraph posted an article entitled “Khmer Rouge killers Live in Contented Retirement as Cambodia Struggles with the Legacy of Pol Pot” and quoted Dara Vanthan,
DC-Cam’s Deputy Director as saying “I think the tribunal has had a great impact on Cambodian society” because “almost two-thirds of Cambodian people are under 30. The tribunal is a means for them to learn about our history.” See more at http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/asia/cambodia/10192536/Khmer-Rouge-killers-live-in-contented-retirement-as-Cambodia-struggles-with-the-legacy-of-Pol-Pot.html and http://www.dnaindia.com/world/1863646/report-pol-pot-s-henchmen-enjoying-a-quiet-retirement

In the 22-28 July issue of e-Paper, Focus Malaysia, there are two articles featuring Mr. Youk Chhang as a Cambodian hero and a custodian of Cambodia’s past. See the detailed stories in Appendix A & B.

On July 25th Sunday Times posted an article online entitled “Young Cambodian Voters Look Beyond the Tragic Past” which discussed how the Khmer Rouge issue became a topic for the 28 July national election. Mr. Youk Chhang was quoted by saying “the Khmer Rouge period has been heavily politicized by all parties. But it is an increasingly ineffective tactic as young people no longer pay attention to such campaign rhetoric.” He said “[a]t the next election, in next five years, politicians will realize this is no longer a tool to gain support”. See more at http://www.sundaytimes.lk/analysis/35675-young-cambodian-voters-look-beyond-tragic-past-by-cat-barton.html

Mr. Youk Chhang, Director of DC-Cam provided a lengthy interview to Austrian magazine Die Furche. The interview focused on a variety of issues including the use of the Khmer Rouge past in the national election campaign, the trauma undergone by KR victims and how to address it, the issue of reconciliation and forgiveness and how younger generation learn about their history. See more in Appendix D.

On July 26th, The Phnom Penh Post published a feature story “Award-winning Director Will Show Her Work Country-Wide” which mentioned that A River Changes Course will be shown at universities and villages nation-wide. “Rather than spur outrage or lay blame at politicians and corruption, the film aims to get people thinking about the bigger issue of Cambodian’s all over industrial development”, said Youk Chhang. D. Listserv

Every day DC-Cam sends out information about the KR and the ECCC to 4000 Listserv members.

9. Permanent Center: The Sleuk Rith Institute

A. School of Genocide, Conflict and Human Rights
DC-Cam requested a license from the government so that the SRI school can offer Bachelor’s Degree courses on genocide, human rights and conflict studies. On June 7, the Ministry of Education visited DC-Cam to discuss DC-Cam’s proposal. DC-Cam director presented up-to-date information of the Sleuk Rith Institute to the people from the Ministry of Education. Terith Chy, then, took them to visit the Sleuk Rith Institute’s site at Boeng Trabek High School, a place where the permanent Sleuk Rith Institute would be built.

Awaiting a license from the ministry, the school team consisting of Kamboly Dy, Sok-Kheang Ly, Farina So, Christine Su and Phala Chea developed a student handbook for the three-month Certificate Program. The crucial focus of the certificate program is courses designed for prospective young leaders – that is, new high school graduates and university freshmen. The Program includes five courses: Understanding Genocide, Conflict and Human Rights; History Conflict of Southeast Asia; War, Peace and Reconciliation; Leadership Development; and Study Skills and Research Methods for Higher Education. The handbook is complete and will be put into a design for publication.

The School team created syllabi for the five courses above. Although it has not yet been determined whether or not the certificate courses will have transferable academic credit, the prospect of a Bachelor of Arts program in Genocide, Conflict, and Human Rights (GCHR) studies and the certificate as a precursor to it did figure in the discussion. It is not uncommon for university students in Cambodia to enroll in more than one university and pursue more than one degree.

B. Museum of Memory

On January 4, DC-Cam in collaboration with the National Museum of Cambodia of the Ministry of Culture and Fine Arts (MCFA) organized a workshop at the National Museum of Cambodia on the topic "Museum Network Connection and Preparing for the 100th Anniversary of the National Museum." The event marked the groundbreaking of museum of memory’s collaborations with the Ministry of Culture and Fine Arts in cultural projects that include development of provincial museums and organizing celebration of 100th anniversary of the National Museum. Also, the workshop was intended to introduce concepts and knowledge relating to museum management, illicit trading and cultural heritage law, and preservation of paper documents.

The event was attended by about fifty participants from the Museum including directors and deputy directors of all the provincial museums across Cambodia and about forty DC-Cam's staff members. Main purpose of the meeting was to introduce collaborative projects to the museum directors who would become the main partners in these projects. At the end of the meeting, participants were requested to fill out survey to address the needs for their museums in regard to the exhibition on the KR topic and their evaluation of the workshop. Full report of the workshop is available at: http://www.d.dccam.org/Projects/Living_Doc/pdf/Report_on_the_workshop_at_the_National_Museum.pdf
Savina Sirik wrote an article about the recent return of the two Koh Ker's statues to Cambodia by Metropolitan Museum of Arts in the US. The article highlighted the importance of the return which marked a meaningful action in bringing Cambodia to the closure of the tragic past. It is available on Phnom Penh Post newspaper and SRI's website: http://www.phnompenhpost.com/2013061866315/Analysis/closure-to-a-tragic-time-period.html http://www.cambodiasri.org/museum/koh_ker_temple_development.php

An international student from Columbia University, U.S. developed a business plan for the Museum of Memory of Sleuk Rith Institute. During his eight-week stay, the student met with director and key staff members to identify needs and locate materials and information to assist in developing the project. The student traveled to Siem Reap with the team to study the site, visit different museums, and meet with museum potential partners to obtain further information and data to finalize the project.

As part of the Museum's collaboration with archaeological research organization Ker Damnel Khmer Foundation, DC-Cam contributed to the making of a documentary about Koh Ker temple entitled "the Lost Wonder" produced by Chen Chanratana, the founder of Ker Damnel Khmer. The documentary addressed critical issues on heritage protection in Cambodia today through an awareness of Koh Ker complex and its history.

The film is available at: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Q9ZgV6526AE http://www.pasthorizons.tv/koh-ker-the-lost-wonder/

On July 8‐13, the team conducted a preliminary research trip to provincial museums in Battambang and Banteay Meanchey provinces. This trip was an implementation of an MOU between DC-Cam and Ministry of Culture and Fine Arts to develop 24 provincial museums throughout Cambodia. The purpose of the trip is to install a Khmer Rouge history exhibition so as to generate better understanding about Khmer Rouge history within the local community.

In Battambang, the team visited the Wat Po Veal museum with permission from the monk. Next, the team visited the provincial museum and held a meeting with the museum director, Mr. Kim Sophorn. A site assessment of the exhibition space was conducted. Interviews were conducted with members of the local community, including high-school students, a retired schoolteacher and villagers. The opinions of foreign visitors to the museum were also sought.

In Banteay Meanchey, the team met with the museum director, Mr. Yung Taing Kuoy, and conducted a site assessment at the provincial museum. Next, the team visited the Tepkosa-Snay archaeological site and the Trapeang Thma dam. The team also met with Mr. Siv Saruon, Head of Culture Department of Banteay Meanchey province. Next, the team visited Wat Sopheak Mongkol and the Khmer Rouge memorial in the pagoda grounds, where an interview was conducted with Mr. Bin Yeun, member of the pagoda committee. Interviews with local high‐school students and villagers were also conducted.

8 This MOU is different from the one made between DC-Cam and the ministry of education.
On July 25-26, the team conducted an assessment of Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum to seek ways to launch an exhibition there. The DC-Cam established a formal collaboration with the Ministry of Culture and Fine arts in 1996. Subsequently, DC-Cam was granted permission from the Ministry of Culture and Fine Arts to establish a project to provide educational elements and visual-audio activities to Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum through a history classroom, photo exhibitions, and film screenings.

A review of DC-Cam exhibitions at the Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum was conducted through site assessments of the museum and the exhibitions, visitor interviews, and analysis of visitor guest books. Overall, the themes explored in the five mini-exhibitions are meaningful and display curatorial coherence. However, their cohesiveness can be improved by increasing the amount of historical information about the Khmer Rouge regime. This will also address the unfortunate lack of contextual information in the rest of the museum complex. Other additions, such as a display of sound bites from present-day Cambodians, will enhance the contemporary relevance of the exhibits as well as symbolize hope for the future. In addition, visitor engagement with DC-Cam exhibits was compromised by the poor quality of the exhibits caused by natural damage over the years. A simple replacement of these exhibits with new full-color prints will increase visitor interest.

After the assessment, the museum team developed a proposal which included the following activities:

a) To refurbish and revitalize existing DC-Cam exhibits at Tuol Sleng, ensuring the optimal experience for visitor
b) To install four video exhibits featuring archival footage of the Tuol Sleng prison taken in 1979. This powerful footage will allow visitors to see the reality of life in the prison as it was first exposed to the outside world before the removal of the bodies of victims
c) To develop and install permanent exhibition on child survivors of Tuol Sleng Prison; and
d) And to provide temporary photographic exhibitions, drawing on DC-Cam’s vast photographic archives.

During the final quarter of the reporting year, the museum team also developed another proposal for a project called “The Sleuk Roka\ Project” at Koh Ker Temple.

As part of the Museum of Memory project in the soon-to-be-established Sleuk Rith Institute, the Museum of Memory will be working closely with APSARA Authority to develop the Koh Ker temple complex into a sustainable educational site. This project will help to preserve and promote the historical and cultural value of Koh Ker.

9 Sleuk Roka refers to finials that line walls and roofs at the temple site. They typically feature elements from Hindu iconography such as the Garuda and the Naga. These images possess spiritual efficacy for the inhabitants of the site, providing protection and summoning fertility and fortune. Other elements that represent key ideas in Hinduism, such as the lotus as a symbol of purity and non-attachment, reflect the rich beliefs that guided the way of life of the people. Therefore, these Sleuk Roka provide valuable insights into the cultural and spiritual traditions of the Khmer people, particularly during the Koh Ker period. Since they still remain in situ today, the Sleuk Roka face the risk of being damaged or looted. As a national heritage site, it must be protected from the illegal trade in artifacts and preserved for future generations of Cambodians. Complexes like Koh Ker are valuable visual and architectural maps of Cambodia’s ancient past, showing us how civilizations built and maintained cities. They also provide insights on the cultural, religious and political practices of the time.
The Sleuk Roka Project has four main objectives: 1) to document existing finials at the Koh Ker temple site; 2) to preserve the finials in their existing condition; 3) to educate the public, especially the local community at Koh Ker and Preah Vihear province about the invaluable historical and cultural value of the Koh Ker temple site and its artifacts; and 4) to use Cambodia’s rich cultural heritage to reconcile differences among Cambodians that arose as a result of the difficult years of civil war and the Khmer Rouge regime.

The project consists of four components:

- Creation of a database system to document information about the finials;
- Collection of finials from Koh Ker temple site;
- Documentation of information about the finials to serve future research; and
- Exhibition of finials and publication of exhibition catalogue to educate the public about the symbolic significance of the artifacts for ancient civilizations, towards rebuilding the spiritual and cultural identity of Cambodian people.

In July 2013, Ms. Tan Sock Keng, a DC-Cam intern, assisted the Museum of Memory team to develop a Museum of Memory Database and Data Entry Guide. After consulting with many resources on database system for museums around the world and the National Museum of Cambodia, Ms. Sock Keng has produced recommendations for the Museum of Memory database which she stated in a report. In the meantime, Ms. Sock Keng also developed a data entry guide so as to help those who would work on future data entry for the Museum of Memory database.

C. Land Provision MOU

On 10 October 2012 DC-Cam successfully signed an MOU with the Ministry of Education. The preparation of the MOU had taken nearly five years. According to the MOU, a plot of land of 4,785.61 square meters, upon which the Sleuk Rith Institute will be built, was provided to DC-Cam for a period of fifty years with subsequent ten-year extensions.

DC-Cam continued discussions with the Ministry of Culture and the National Museum of Cambodia over possible collaborations in the coming years. These include the celebration of the 100th anniversary for the National Museum of Cambodia and the KR exhibition at all twenty-four provincial museums across Cambodia. The Sleuk Rith Museum team and the Ministry of Culture and Fine Arts and the National Museum are planning to hold a workshop with officials from the twenty-four provincial museums across the country to launch the Museum of Memory project.

10 Comprehensive documentation of the finials can aid in the research of these invaluable artifacts from Cambodia’s past, as there is currently little research on the cultural remnants of Koh Ker and of the finials. In addition, documentation can allow heritage experts to track the presence of the finials and to guard against theft and looting.

11 Upon initial removal from the site, under the care of conservation experts, the finials can be protected from further deterioration.
D. Building Design

DC-Cam received support of Zaha Hadid Architect, a world class architectural company, for the future design of the Sleuk Rith Institute. DC-Cam has contacted the construction consulting firm of Red Furnesse to serve as its technical consultant in technical discussions with Zaha Hadid. DC-Cam legal advisors have been drafting an agreement with the company. The agreement is expected to be signed in early 2014.

E. Develop Strategic Planning

Rutherford Hubbard from the University of Michigan was recruited to flush out the Sleuk Rith Plan as well as financial sustainability for the institute. He produced strategic plans for the Sleuk Rith Institute to operate its major three pillars—museum, research, and school—and a fundraising package. The package included SRI’s proposal, organizational management chart, financial management guideline, five year strategic plan, updated brochure, and monitoring, evaluation and reporting plan. In addition, he also updated and revised key project proposals as DC-Cam transitions to the Sleuk Rith Institute.

Four international students from Thunderbird School of Global Management arrived at DC-Cam and developed business plan for the Sleuk Rith Institute’s Endowment, School, Museum and Research Institute. DC-Cam also put the team in touch with Professor Heng Vanda, member of DC-Cam Board of Directors, in order that he could provide financial inputs into the team’s development of the business plan. Following their five weeks field research, the students produced a comprehensive report analyzing the current situations of the four elements and providing recommendations for DC-Cam to consider its future plan.

Mr. Youk Chhang, Director
Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam)
66 Sihanouk Blvd
Phnom Penh, Cambodia

Dear Director Chhang,

As 2013 approaches I think of those who have most influenced my life in 2012. You, Mr. Socheat Nhean, and your staff members are at that top of that list. I shall always be grateful for your kindness to me, for the time and effort given to my cause, for precious space in “Searching for Truth,” and for all efforts associated with my having found the 1st family in December, 2011. I am profoundly influenced and changed by that encounter and by my subsequent visit in 2012. We remain in contact to this day, and I believe always will.

Through the Documentation Center of Cambodia my life has been changed in several specific ways. First, a tear in my heart has been healed. Because of the abrupt and brutal way my friend Sareth was forced by my family to leave the United States in 1965 there was, over and above the sadness of losing his company, a lingering sorrow in my heart. Meeting his brother Ith Sandap and his sister Ith Sveth and being able to look into their faces, explain what happened, and receive such understanding and warmth in return was one of the most healing moments of my life.

Second, the time I spent in Cambodia with you, Mr. Socheat Nhean, the 1st family, and the Cambodian people has redirected my inner self to a more positive and peaceful place. Since the 1960’s I have carried guilt about the involvement of the US in Southeast Asia and the effects of the “American War” on the Cambodian people and the Cambodian landscape. The only image I carried of Cambodia was one of devastation and human injury; it was fixed in my mind. You and your staff at the Documentation Center of Cambodia, specifically Mr. Socheat Nhean, have afforded me the opportunity to understand how far Cambodia has come since that time. I now see a country stepping forward economically, socially, and educationally. Everywhere I went I found acceptance and kindness. I saw industrious citizens working to make their lives and the lives of others better. Although the past cannot be changed, you showed me that we can change our point of view and understanding of it. In so doing, we in a sense free ourselves to take the lessons from it and apply those lessons bought at very high price to ensure a better future.

Third, I have been reunited with “my family.” I find it difficult to express the effect of having been received and accepted in such a gracious way by the extended family of my friend Sareth. I recognized them, and they recognized me in the most fundamental of ways. I felt as if we had always known each other. As I was preparing to leave Cambodia brother Sandap said to me, “Our brother Sareth was taken from us during the war; now he has sent us you.”

It is obvious to me that this healing and reconciliation is not unique to me. It is being duplicated throughout your country and in other parts of the world by the continuing efforts of the Documentation Center of Cambodia. Please express my gratitude to everyone at the Center. Please tell them that their dedication and good work is making the world a better place in ways that they cannot always know. Please assure them that their influence extends beyond national boundaries and into the hearts and minds of people all over the world.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Chhang:

I would like to thank you personally for participating in the roundtable discussion on human rights organized by the U.S. Embassy on November 20, 2012 for Ms. Valerie Jarrett, Senior Advisor to the President and Chair of the White House Council on Women and Girls, and Ms. Samantha Power, Special Assistant to the President and Senior Director of the Office of Multilateral Affairs and Human Rights.

Promoting human rights and free and fair elections is one of the U.S. government’s highest priorities in Cambodia. The emphasis that President Obama places on these issues is evident by the fact that he asked two of his most senior advisors to meet with you while he was in Phnom Penh for the East Asia Summit. The contributions you made to the discussion were well received at the highest levels of the U.S. government.

I look forward to our continued partnership in strengthening respect for human rights in Cambodia. Please accept my deepest appreciation for the vital work that you are doing in this field.

Sincerely,

Appendix C: Diary Illuminates Hardships Under the Khmer Rouge Regime

By Chhorn Channy and Dene-Hern Chen

The printed image on the cover of a tattered diary with yellowed pages displays an idyllic scene: three women bathing in an aqua-colored river shaded by trees.

But don’t judge a book by its cover. The diary holds the harrowing, and at times heartbreaking, account of its author, Poch Yoonly, a victim of the Khmer Rouge, and describes the ordeal his family faced during the regime that sent 1.7 million Cambodians to their graves.

His daughter, Poch, Viseth Neary—referred throughout the diary—donated the book to the Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam), a research institute dedicated to the study of the regime, on Friday.

Poch Yoonly’s "extremely rare" written account remains one of only four diaries in DC-Cam’s possession that were kept by Khmer Rouge victims, said Youk Chhang, the organization’s director.

"This is something that every survivor wishes to have left behind by their parents," Mr. Chhang said. "This diary shows a picture of what daily life was like during the Khmer Rouge.

Formerly a primary school inspector for the Ministry of Education living in Kompong Chhnang City during Lon Nol’s regime, Poch Yoonly, who was about 90 in 1975, his wife and nine children were evacuated to a collective in Kompong Tralach district on April 19, 1975.

The diary was written toward the end of his life, sometime in mid-1976, and the prose reads like a father speaking out loud to his children—beesecching them to make sure his grandchildren remember him and his life. He regularly refers to himself in the third person simply as “father.”

"This is father’s history. When you receive this diary, you must organize to publish it and distribute it to all your relatives, and to your children and grandchildren so that they will know father,” the diary says at its close.

The diary describes the arduous evacuation of Kompong Chhnang and how the family suffered from the hot weather and lack of food for about 11 days. Once they arrived at the collective, Poch Yoonly’s wife was sent to work in the rice fields, while the children were put to work as part of the mobile children unit.

"On July 17, 1975, Viseth [my daughter] was sick for about one month. So Nineth [my son] stole chicken and cassava. His actions brought shame to the family,” Poch Yoonly wrote, adding later that the family ate only porridge for five months at one point. "Everyone was sad and there is always a shortage of everything."

There were tender moments too. Vilobil, the youngest of the nine children, often worried that his father was going to pass away—he suffered from lung disease and bad stomachaches—and continually pestered him to talk when he was unable to speak or move.

"[Vilobil] opened father’s mouth for talking because he did not want me to be silent. He shook my hands and legs when I could not move. Father has great pity for your brother.”

In one excerpt, his wife’s jewelry is exchanged for more medicine for Poch Yoonly, and he pleads with his daughters in his diary to take care of his wife as she is “incapable to anyone in father’s life.”

Your mother cries in her heart, in her mind; she cries inside, and no one ever sees her cry.”

He begins for death at the end, assuring his daughters that he is unafraid and would like to meet his dead parents and relatives in the afterlife. “Let me die—I cannot live in a world of darkness without news, in a world of ignorance,” Poch Yoonly wrote. “Father saw a lot of the new world and there was enough life lived during my lifetime.”

Ms. Viseth Neary, 50, said yesterday she remembers that period vividly. Her father wrote the diary before he was taken away to a prison in August 1976. The family learned he had died a few months later.

The diary only survived, she explained, because her mother had hidden it. "He wrote to talk about the difficulties in the Pol Pot regime. To let the young generation know," Ms. Viseth Neary said.

Hit-and-run driver to be out in weeks

Have you been waiting for weeks for that hit-and-run driver to have to face justice? Well, they might be out of jail sooner than you think.

The driver, who fled the scene of the accident, has been charged with driving under the influence of drugs and leaving the scene of an accident. The driver was spotted by witnesses who followed the driver to a nearby hospital. The driver was found unconscious and was taken to the hospital for treatment.

The driver’s lawyer, Mr. John Doe, stated that his client is innocent and that the evidence presented against him is insufficient. He also stated that his client is willing to cooperate with the authorities to clear his name.

The victim, who was hit by the driver’s vehicle, is currently in a coma and is in critical condition. The victim’s family is demanding justice for their loved one and is calling on the driver to face the consequences of his actions.

Meanwhile, the police are continuing their investigation and are urging anyone with information about the accident to come forward. The investigation is ongoing and the driver may face further charges.

In a related matter, a local restaurant owner was arrested for assault after an argument escalated into a physical fight. The restaurant owner was charged with assault and battery and is scheduled to appear in court next week.

The local community is calling for greater accountability and justice for victims of violent crimes. They are demanding that the police take action and that those who commit crimes are held accountable for their actions.

Appendix F: Closure to a Tragic Time Period
Appendix G: Appeal for Donation of Archives Related to the Khmer Rouge and UNTAC Periods

Cambodia, June 12, 2013

To Whom It May Concern:

The Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam) respectfully appeals for the donation of archival material related to the Khmer Rouge (KR) and United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC) periods.

DC-Cam is an independent Cambodian NGO originally created by Yale University scholars pursuant to the Cambodian Genocide Justice Act of 1994. It is dedicated to ensuring memory and justice in Cambodia with respect to the abuses of the infamous Democratic Kampuchea (DK) regime. The Center is the largest provider of evidence to the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC), and it has been a pivotal stakeholder in Cambodia’s post-conflict reconciliation and reconstruction efforts. As part of these efforts, DC-Cam supports a wide variety of different projects that contribute to scholarship, education, and promotion of the arts. It is through these efforts that DC-Cam has been recognized as the principal agent for all genocide education curricula in Cambodia’s public school system.

But education is only one part of Cambodia’s struggle. Poor library services and the public’s awareness and access to documents and archival material continue to be an ongoing hurdle in the country’s struggle to reclaim its cultural and historical heritage. Indeed, Cambodia has suffered decades of war, atrocity, and social upheaval that ravaged the country’s academic, scholarship, and cultural heritage systems. Even today, vast quantities of documents, photographs, film, and audio recordings remain scattered to individuals and institutions around the world. With an aim toward restoring the country’s access to these materials, DC-Cam appeals for their donation. Of course, individuals and institutions may have legitimate concerns about protecting the confidentiality of certain sources. DC-Cam is cognizant of this concern, and we believe viable solutions can always be found to such problems.

DC-Cam has been at the forefront of the effort to collect, catalogue, and publicize records related to the Khmer Rouge period, and it is a recognized leader in the overarching struggle to ensure truth, accountability, and justice in the wake of mass violence. DC-Cam appeals for the donation of archival material as part of its mission to provide Cambodians with greater access to their history by housing these archival collections within its facilities.

Sincerely,
Youk Chhang Director,
The Documentation Center of Cambodia

"Graciously is part of my identity, and a part of me. It is imperative for us to embrace our past and move on, instead of ignoring it. After all, the meaning of justice is defined in different ways.

"How do you begin to bring justice to the people? What are the tools we have that could help the Khmer Rouge?" I asked an official at the Rainsy Institute of the United Nations in Phnom Penh.

"There are many ways," he said. "But the most effective is through education. The Khmer Rouge's main weapon was fear. It was the weapon that kept them in power. We need to educate the people to understand the truth and to prevent the Khmer Rouge from returning."

In A River Changes Course, Khmer-American filmmaker Kayaree Mam showed with spectacular imagery and intimate real-life characters, how the Kingdom is changing with the tide of rapid development. This week she returns to Cambodia in the immediate lead-up to the election, still hoping the film’s impact will make voters think about the country’s bigger picture.

ROSA ELLI

Film crew are not usually used to the descending landscape of rice fields, from the birds-eye view of an air- cone. When Kayaree Mam returned to Cambodia in 1998 as a 21-year-old, it was her first time back in the country since fleeing to the United States with her family as a child. ‘The beauty of the landscape’ stood her.

When she next visited ten years later, the view from the plane was rather different. Mam noted changes had occurred throughout the country, and was working as a history underdraf with Yale University’s Cambodian genocide program. Travelling and interviewing villagers with the program’s Documentation Centre of Cambodia (DC-Cam), she began to hear first-hand the new problems faced by survivors of the Khmer Rouge’s reign of terror, environmental destruction and the economic cost of rapid agrarian-industrialisation on farmers.

This year’s 36-year-old documentary film A River Changes Course, is a deeply stunningly Mor portrait of three Cambodians whose lives are irrevocably changed as a consequence of development, won this year’s Sundance Film Festival’s World Cinema Grand Jury Prize. This decision made, the documentarians were returning to the Kingdom to film screenings of her film to interviews and villages in the hope of fostering discussion around Cambodia’s future in the minds of local people.

“I think our people are talking about specific things in the election like deforestation – a lot of NGOs are fighting the land grabbing and a lot of human rights organisations are helping to open up the discussion about the issues presented in the film.”

But the conversation is larger than that. It is not just about land rights or deforestation or overcrowding or factory workers’ rights, it is about the future of the country and what we want for our children. What we should want is a country in which people have dignity and connection to their land. People are able to live a significant life. That’s what the movie is about.

Like the airplane view that welcomed Mam and film crew home, the film offers a striking perspective on Cambodia’s environmental crossings. From the unscathed forests of Ratanakiri, to the deforested plains of Battambang, the film captures the stark change and the ecological disaster of Cambodia’s deforestation. At the heart of the film is a young woman who was born in the Khmer Rouge era, who lost her parents and had to fend for herself. She talks about her journey, her struggle to survive and her determination to continue fighting for her people.

A still from Mam’s award-winning documentary A River Changes Course.

The documentary explores the lives of those who have been left behind by Cambodia’s recent economic boom. The film traces the lives of three people who have been affected by the country’s rapid development, and their struggles to find their place in a changing society.

‘What we should want is a country where people have dignity and connection to their land.’

Engaging with the local community, Mam and her crew talk to those affected by the deforestation and factory closures. They share their experiences, their stories, and their fears. They show the impact of rapid development on the land and the people who live on it. They bring attention to the struggles of those who have been left behind.

‘When I was a child, I never imagined myself as a filmmaker, now I don’t consider myself a filmmaker, I don’t consider myself a story teller. I was a story teller – I was a story teller – I was a story teller.’

The film is a powerful testament to the resilience of the Cambodian people and their determination to fight for a better future. It is a story of hope and courage, of fighting against the tide of rapid development and deforestation. It is a reminder of the importance of连接 to land and the need to protect it.

The film’s impact is still felt today. It has sparked discussions and raised awareness of the environmental issues facing Cambodia. It has inspired other filmmakers to continue telling stories about the country’s past and present.

‘What we should want is a country where people have dignity and connection to their land.’

This is the message that A River Changes Course carries forward, reminding us of the importance of protecting our environment and our people. It is a powerful reminder of the need to work together to create a better future for all.”
When we screened the film in Phnom Penh last year, it struck a chord with the Cambodian audience. Many thought about the issue of climate change, the lack of clean air and water, and the impact on their daily lives. Some even mentioned the specific situations they had encountered in their daily lives that were depicted in the film.

The film opened with a scene of a river polluted with plastic waste, which is a common sight in Cambodia. The audience was moved to tears as they remembered the smell and the sight of the river. The film then went on to depict the effects of climate change on the environment, including the loss of biodiversity and the destruction of habitats.

The audience also felt a sense of hope through the story of the Cambodian people who are fighting against the effects of climate change. The film showed how they are working together to protect their environment and their way of life. The audience was inspired by their determination and resilience.

The film ended with a scene of the river flowing clean again, which was met with applause and cheers. The audience felt a sense of relief and hope for the future.

The audience left the screening with a greater understanding of the issue of climate change and the importance of protecting the environment. They also felt a sense of pride and solidarity with the Cambodian people who are fighting against the effects of climate change. The film was a powerful reminder of the need for action and the importance of working together to solve this global problem.

Thai Ex-Minister in Trouble Over Preah Vihear

By Simon Lewis
THE CAMBODIA DAILY

A former Thai foreign minister is facing misconduct charges over a statement he signed with Cambodian Deputy Prime Minister Sok An regarding the Preah Vihear temple, according to a Thai newspaper report.

Noppadol Pattara, once an adviser to disgraced former Thai Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra, and who was foreign minister for five months in 2007, signed a joint declaration with Mr. An in June of that year supporting Cambodian application to list Preah Vihear as a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

After political turmoil in Thailand, the Thai National Anti-Corruption Commission accused Mr. Noppadol and other members of the People Power Party of breaching a rule in the country’s Constitution that says Parliament must be consulted on any treaty affecting that territory.

Bangkok-based English-language newspaper The Nation reported yesterday a Thai court on Saturday began the process of indicting Mr. Noppadol for misconduct.

The report says Mr. Noppadol is currently free on bail and has denied the allegations, claiming that the agreement with Cambodia did not affect Thailand’s territory.

UNESCO inscribed Preah Vihear as a World Heritage Site in July 2000. Mr. Noppadol resigned later that month and tensions mounted during the year until clashes broke out around the temple in October.

Cambodia’s Council of Ministers spokesman Phay Siphathoeun said the pair’s declaration did not affect Thai territory since Cambodia consulted, in order to expedite inscription, that the World Heritage site would only cover the temple itself, not the disputed surrounding area.

“I was not territorial, he just supported listing the temple,” Mr. Siphathoeun said. “His signature on the document, if anything, shows he agreed with Cambodia’s declaration.”

Noppadol then stopped attending meetings once the decision was taken, the spokesman added.

DC-Cam to Help Burma Record Rights Abuses

By Dine-Henr Chen
THE CAMBODIA DAILY

Frustrated Kamer Roughe, a researcher at the Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam), is collaborating with a network of Burmese groups seeking to create an archive of human rights abuses in Burma as the country transitions from a military regime to an allegedly new democracy.

The Network for Human Rights Documentation-Burma (NHRD-Burma), which includes local NGOs dedicated to advocating for Burmese political prisoners, ethnic minorities and women’s rights, is planning to implement the unprecedented Truth and Reconciliation Commission (UPF) that will document ongoing rights violations in the country, Han Gyi, a coordinator for NHRD-Burma, said in an email.

DC-Cam Director Youn Chheng visited Burma last month to discuss the challenges that came with documenting and understanding human rights violations, said Mr. Han Gyi, adding that the Cambodian center’s expertise in compiling and understanding documents and evidence would be helpful in assisting NHRD-Burma.

“The project also aims to provide a basis for the government to provide reparations, especially to those with urgent needs,” Mr. Han Gyi said. “In the long term, the aim is to present serious human rights violations.”

Because many members of the current government are from the previous regime, the word “truth-seeking” or “truth commission” in the rest of DC-Cam would be considered threatening, said Mr. Han Gyi, which is why it is far, far, an unofficial project.

After decades of military rule, Burma is opening up, introducing reforms such as free elections, increased press freedom and the release of some political prisoners.

However, human rights violations still persist in the country, most recently due to the growing polarization between Buddhism and minority Muslims. In the past year, more than 200 people have been killed in religious clashes and more than 150,000 have been displaced — the majority Muslims known as the Rohingya.

Mr. Chheng said yesterday that NHRD-Burma would be sending some members to Cambodia on August 19 for about two months to learn documentation techniques.

“Forme, it’s fortunate to have the chance to guide them through the political milieu of a project at this stage,” said Mr. Chheng. “But sometimes polar opposition of ensuring that historical records are preserved in their entirety and maintaining a sufficiently positive relationship with those...government and the background players which invariably will include key remnants of the old regime,” he said.

Garment workers see lives reflected on the big screen

The three minute footage captured last week by Min and her team was released as a short film-in-verisimilitude approach. The film, which tells the story of garment workers in Cambodia, was chosen by the World Creative Network to be screened at the Sundance Film Festival. The film, titled “See Lives Reflected on the Big Screen,” is about a garment worker who, through her work, is able to support her family.

The documentary, directed by Amy Heckerling, follows the lives of several garment workers in Cambodia. The film captures the day-to-day struggles of these workers, who often work long hours for little pay. The documentary highlights the courage of these workers, who continue to work despite the challenges they face.

The film premiered at the Sundance Film Festival last month, where it was well-received. The film has been praised for its powerful storytelling and for bringing attention to the difficult circumstances of garment workers.

In brief

Mai Pham, a Cambodian garment worker, was killed in a factory accident. Mai Pham, who was 25 years old, died from injuries sustained in the accident. Mai Pham had been working at the factory for two years. The factory, located in Phnom Penh, is owned by a Chinese company. Mai Pham was working on a production line when she fell from a height and died on the spot. Mai Pham’s death is the latest in a series of accidents that have occurred at the factory in recent months.

Mai Pham’s death highlights the dangerous working conditions that many garment workers face in Cambodia. The garment industry is the largest employer in the country, and many workers are forced to work long hours for low pay.

The factory where Mai Pham worked is owned by a Chinese company. The company has been criticized for its labor practices, including low pay and long hours.

The Ministry of Labor is investigating the accident and has ordered the factory to improve safety conditions.

Mai Pham’s family is demanding justice for her death. They are calling for the factory to be closed and for the people responsible for the accident to be held accountable.

Mai Pham’s death has shocked the garment workers union, which is calling for a full investigation into the accident and for the government to take action to improve safety conditions in the garment industry.

Mai Pham’s death is a stark reminder of the dangers that many garment workers face in Cambodia. The government must take action to ensure that the workers are safe and that their rights are protected.

Documentation Helps Raise Human Rights Awareness in Asia

Dressed in black and red tie, Youk Chhang—Executive Director of the Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam) has for many years played a key role in the field of historical archives in Cambodia, especially in documenting political changes and the Khmer Rouge regime.

Since 1995, in a field office of Yale University’s Cambodian Genocide Program, DC-Cam has focused on documenting, memory and justice. It greatly contributed to providing comprehensive information to the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC) to bring Khmer Rouge leaders to justice. The DC-Cam was also a major force in the integration since 2007 of Khmer Rouge history into textbooks and curricula at the high school level (grades 7-10) including foundation year for all universities in Cambodia. In 2010, DC-Cam successfully established an agreement with the Cambodian government to run the Sleum Hub Institute, which is aimed to be a permanent hub of genocide studies in Asia.

Following the screening of the documentary “A River Changes Course,” produced by DC-Cam and winner of the 2013 Sundance Film Festival’s Grand Jury Prize, Youk Chhang was invited to an AHI public forum to discuss critical issues in Asia. He shared his valuable experience on the role of documentary film, people-building through memory, testimony relating to documentation in Asia, and regional collaborations.

We always have to show the target audience the film is “A River Changes Course.” How has the success of the film at the Sundance Film Festival brought more recognition for this film? (key message)

Global audiences are our main target because the film deals with issues that are both local to Cambodia and global. The film focuses on individual lives. It’s about ordinary people. It’s a familiar story to everyone.

We see the new challenges in the region. The Cambodian genocide and the globalisation of human rights where issues, like access to water, are socially and economically important to all.

People are now working in factories where they earn very little. But Cambodia is not alone. Similar issues exist elsewhere. We hope that policymakers and investors will be more conscious of the issues when they make decisions to invest. The film also aims to encourage local people to protect their own environment, defend their own territories and define the future.

The award is not our trophy but an encouragement for us. It shows the value of the film as someone everywhere can relate to the issues it presents. We thus have a campaign to show it at as many international film festivals and universities as possible. To make sure the film is seen, the film has been shown in 24 film festivals around the world.

How do you handle pressure from stakeholders, like the business community?

To stand in your own feet for what you believe in relation to human rights, you’ve got to be ready to be effective. It’s not always the easiest thing to do, but when you work for something you believe in, you shouldn’t be scared.

For the pressure, sociology at all has threatened me. I think the process of not making the documentary was of benefit to people. Recently, the film had 95 representatives from 20 countries, of international organisations (Human Rights Watch) in Phnom Penh, the capital, after the end of the group’s conference. These organisations provide fund to the poor to do the farming, exactly like the film.

The film holds their attention because what they saw isn’t just not what they thought it was. They think their investment were somewhat failures. One of them said he felt stronger, and that he will not longer make the mistakes.

PEACE-BUILDING THROUGH MEMORIES:
DC-Cam holds large documentary archives. How do you handle the pressures involved in gathering information?

Documentation is a political act. There are people who have to understand the film and make it available. The film is a political act that involves critical issues. It’s also a political act, it has political right.

There have been many challenges along the way, including network and technological challenges. I take a decision step back in the early days, there was no internet, no YouTube, nothing. We had to think about how to tell the material, including the documentary film footage.

In terms of networking often no one wanted to associate with me because the Khmer Rouge is a highly sensitive issue, both inside and outside the country. Inside the country, there is intimidation, there were a challenge. But when someone and this writer, or some unknown person, threaten me, I threatened them back, because I had nothing to fear from them. I am a victim and I am a survivor. Why should I be afraid? That’s my belief. This is my mission to bring the truth.

I also had to deal with national policy, causing tension to the research. For example, I was being held on Koblenz in Thailand for many years, but failed. It’s very open and I could never move. But for that, I had to give it up. And I had to give it up. You have to understand the Khmer Rouge from the outside too. You have to understand them from different perspectives.

So I have worked on this both inside and outside the country.
INTERVIEW

How much freedom have you had from the government, we know that Phnom Penh was once part of the Khmer Rouge?

One hundred percent freedom. As far as Phnom Penh, we have the free press. The main reason why I want to express it is because the DC-CAM is not a court. We have our own objectives. The issue of justice is for the tribunal. The Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC). The government has really made an effort. One reason why the government supports the court is that they also perceive themselves as victims of the Khmer Rouge regime. Our research was mainly seen by them as a benefit to them.

There were only two countries in the world supporting this process when it started. One was Cambodia because they saw this as a benefit to justice. Secondly, the United States government, because the US was under pressure to look into the crimes committed by the Khmer Rouge. Because people never look at these crimes as human rights violations. Others around the world always felt like genocide was a very sensitive issue. When people looked at World War II, they felt the Holocaust was very complicated. But later we got support from European countries like the Netherlands, Sweden, Denmark, etc.

As now we have international support, its up to Cambodia to make the difference and to change course. And we are changing course now in terms of Khmer Rouge history.

What if people wish to avoid facing reality and painful memories? How does the theory that "knowledge brings relief" actually work?

If people don’t want to talk about their experiences, you should respect that as part of the documentation process. We have no right to tell people to talk. If the government asks to respect people’s choices about how they want to face their lives, healing is rather a personal thing for people themselves.

Only about ten or fifteen percent of victims wish to keep their experiences secret, according to surveys which have been conducted nationwide not only by us, but also by other international institutions. We carry out surveys on every two or three years. Usually 85-97 percent of victims support the process of documentation and justice. Most survivors want their children to learn and to know about their experiences of what happened. We also encourage students to get involved, as part of the process of healing by interviewing parents and neighbors. This work by students has been integrated into high school curricula nationwide. It was a personal task in the healing process. I think parents want to talk to their own children more than they want to talk to me. I think most parents feel very appreciated if their children want to know their experience, not part of a task or assignment.

Before the first ever Khmer Rouge History was integrated into the textbooks in 2002, how did the generation born after the “killing fields” era perceive them?

I believe that the current textbooks were more about politics, not even about history. After students read the new 70-page introduction to the history of the Khmer Rouge, they had many questions including about the political issues, about British materials, beliefs in previous lives, and about past events and the Vietnam War. The problem was that the teachers did not have the ability to answer all the questions. So we tried to identify the common questions from a total of 4500 frequently asked questions nationwide, and we provided materials for history teachers to help them answer the questions in detail with the issues.

There is also a challenge with regard to Khmer Rouge parents. Most of them parents do not talk about their children. We learned that in Phnom Penh, one student once told a teacher, “I don’t need to teach me, because I know my parents are Khmer Rouge.” The children became a bit aggressive other than challenging for the truth, and the teachers got scared. Many issues on Cambodia are still being challenged like this. It is not an easy process. But Cambodia needs to face this. So we have many different national and international programs with institutions, and even issues on TV and in media like magazines and other publications. You could call it a huge revolution program.

DC-Cam Annual Report 2013

I think there is a lack of understanding about human rights in Southeast Asia. There are also many conflicts around domestic politics and policies in Asian countries. How to teach people about peace? It's actually about human rights.

And we are very open. In addition, we have an agreement between the government (starting from 2010) to operate the Sathit Phum Institute. We were nominated by the International Association of Cambodian Scholars as a hub in Asia on genocide study, and we see part of that network.

How do you think awareness of human rights can be enhanced in Asia? It's very hard. In the past, you could see many Asians close to study subjects such as accounting, banking, engineering, or food. Anyway, now it's perhaps different. Studying human rights in Asia is beginning. More Asians now study human rights and do research on genocide, and since it is more convenient to travel between ASEAN countries, recently we are seeing a growing number of ASEAN students.

These are two different groups. People in post-conflict countries like Syria, Iraq, Myanmar, and others are more interested in history. In stable countries like Thailand and others, people are more interested in courses and scholarships on documentation. But there is an interest in the study of human rights and genocide is rising.

What are your expectations around collaboration between public intellectuals in Asia?

In the media sector, some journalists in ASEAN could be experts in the topic of genocide and human rights. In academic genocide should be studied in formal programs. Scholarships provided to young scholars in Asia would be good as this would enable them to go back to their countries and teach and integrate the issues in the fields of sociology, history, geography, politics, etc. genocide study should be a formal program. There could be a study focusing on the implications of genocide and international law should be supported.

In relation to the ASEAN Community in 2015, I think we have to understand the principles of human rights. It would be a failure to fully integrate. In terms of economics and the English language, for example, we should be proud of speaking more than English, as this is a principle concept of human rights. ASEAN youth populations have to understand human rights, because they will become leaders of the region. If ASEAN wants to compete with the European Union or others around the world, each of our countries needs to show challenges and visions. In order to survive, it will take time, but we can do it. We are not blind, and we have learnt. We have technology. There are also opportunities. One day we will have a good ASEAN community.

Myanmar is in the process of setting up a documentation centre to reflect on decades of human rights abuses, it’s using the records of Toul Sleng prison as inspiration.

POPPY McMIH残忍SEN

TOMIHI Myint Lay remembered visiting Toul Sleng last month, the former prison where he spent 14 years as a political prisoner. He saw the photographs of victims and turned away. “I didn’t dare to see their faces, because I lost my friends in prison, I didn’t want to see these horrible things.”

During his nine-year stay in Cambodia, which ended Wednesday, 50-year-old Tomihi Myint Lay returned several times to Toul Sleng, now a war monument in Phnom Penh. In the prison’s Khmer Rouge museum, a picture of 11,000 to 12,000 men, women and children were tortured and then executed.

He said with Chaw Thi, one of a handful of known S-21 survivors. The 82-year-old is one of two survivors who returned to the place they were detained at, to remember, take pictures and talk to victims.

Chaw Thi was transferred. He wanted to see people in Myanmar, he went later. This year, a group visited, and took photos together: two former prisoners, separated by a few hundred miles.

Tomihi Myint Lay and fellow Burmese activist Nang Hti Htwe win have spent the past month in the Kingdom working with the Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam), which collects documentation and evidence about the Khmer Rouge regime.

One of the goals of the organization which sent them is to create a documentation center to serve Myanmar. There, many human rights abuses have taken place. He said, in response to the visit.

The “Stabilization Project” is an initiative of the Network for Human Rights in Myanmar (ND Burma), a coalition of 12 other organizations. Their aim is to establish an accurate historical record of abuses which can be drawn upon to lobby for justice, and used as evidence in any future tribunals.

Myint Lay said Myanmar, there’s no question, is not the same. According to him, there’s a lack of confidence in ND-Burma, the reason for the “unofficial” role in making clear the intent of a government program.

“[It] is not the truth that's unclear, it is the process,” he wrote in an email.

Since ND-Burma was founded in 2009, the network, which is based in Chiang Mai, Thailand, has built up a human rights network with Myanmar. Its work has included developing a website which uses open source software, and including material on human rights.

A key factor in the country’s recent progress in recent years has been the establishment of a general and then prime minister under the Pepec, which led to the establishment of a new democratic government in 1988.

Chaw Thi Myint Lay said the ability to recall things while in Malaysia.

“[If] they saw a piece of paper, they would punish me.”

Penalties included beatings, starvation and a forced isolation room.

“My room was very bad. You couldn’t get out, you couldn’t sit anything.

—end—

Yook Chiang at the Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam), said:

There was no light in this room.

When he came in, they tore down his hair, shaved his face, and beat him until he was unconscious.

“[It] is not the truth that’s unclear, it is the process,” he said.

Human rights activists are still arrested in Myanmar, despite the formation of a nominally civilian government in 2011 to replace the military junta which had ruled since 1962.

There are thought to be more than 100 political prisoners still in jail, although the government has granted releases, all by the end of 2013.

Two years ago, President Thein Sein announced a larger peace and political amnesty for human rights abuses.

ND Burma has been involved in several cases, including the Education Society of the Organization, which takes its name from the 1988 demonstrations, in part of ND Burma and the “Stabilization Project.”

THE PUNISH FOR FUDAO. SEPT. 15, 2013

The Burmese and the Khmer Rouge

The victims of Tool Seng included four Cambodians of Burmese descent, belonging to the Koko ethnic group, according to Chiang. The firm's deputy chairman was also the Khmer Rouge's Brother Number One, Pol Pot. In late November 1979, Burmese military dictator Ne Win became the first -- and only -- head of state of a non-communist country -- to visit Cambodia while the Khmer Rouge was still in power, according to documents obtained by DC-Cam.

He spent several days in the country hosted by Ehsan Sanasbin and other Khmer Rouge leaders. Ne Win was taken to Angkor Wat, a crocodile farm near Phnom Penh, which the Khmer Rouge claimed to have been almost completely destroyed. In a speech in the capital on November 26, Ne Win stated that "April 17 was a fateful day for the people of Kampuchea. We are very happy that the Kampuchean people on that day won a decisive victory in their struggle for independence."
I just want them to be held accountable for what they have done for more than 50 years long.
